Evans squeaks into 11th-hour lead

By MARK SHENEFELT
United Press International

BOISE — Democratic Gov. John Evans nosed into a slight advantage over GOP gubernatorial nominee Phil Batt today, scoring late gains in election returns from populous Ada and Bannock counties to reverse the challenger's early lead.

While Evans and Batt sweated out their see-saw race, GOP Reps. George Hansen and Larry Craig handily defeated Democratic challengers, and Republicans swept most of the statewide races.

Attorney General David Leroy, the Republican nominee for lieutenant governor, scored a runaway win over state Sen. Mike Mitchell, D-Lewiston, and independent splinter candidate James Miller of Coeur d'Alene.

Meantime, Jerome attorney Jim Jones — running his third political campaign in four years — was victorious over Democratic opponent J.D. Williams in the attorney general's race.

Marjorie Ruth Moon claimed a sixth four-year term as state treasurer, defeating GOP candidate Doyle Miner.

However, veteran Idaho Auditor Joe Williams, seeking a record seventh four-year term, was locked in a close battle with Boise accountant Nolan Young.

Secretary of State Pete Cenarrusa and Public Instruction Superintendent Jerry Evans, both Republicans, were unopposed for re-election.

With 84 percent of the precincts reported, Evans led Batt with 139,072 votes to 137,120 — a split of less than 1 percent.

Craig garnered 72,141 votes, or 54 percent, with 80 percent of the votes counted in his First District race with Larry LaRocco, who had 62,231, or 46 percent.

Hansen was holding a sufficient lead over Democrat Richard Stallings as the Pocatello Republican secured a seventh term in Congress. Hansen had 72,357 votes to 65,535 for Stallings.

With more than two-thirds of the precincts reported across the state, Leroy had 126,381 votes, or 55 percent, to 41,296, or 44 percent, for Mitchell. Miller collected 2,933 for 1 percent.

Jones outpaced J.D. Williams with 121,271 votes, or 48 percent, to 110,892 votes, or 48 percent, for attorney general, while Moon had polled 136,696, or 59 percent, to 96,072 votes, or 41 percent, for Miner.

Joe Williams led Young 51 percent to 49 percent, with the vote standing at 118,190 to 117,712.

Elections officials around the state reported turnout was heavier than the 55-percent rate they expected.

Twin Falls County Clerk Richard Pence said he was "elated" that more than 50 percent of the voters registered turned out in some precincts — 15 percent more than he had predicted. Turnout in Ada County, the state's most populous, was expected to come close to 60 percent, with an expected 85.5 percent in Kootenai County and 55 percent in Latah County.

Governor Evans, the lone remaining Democrat holding a major state or congressional office in Idaho, and Batt fought through a long campaign that cost upward of $1 million.

The incumbent, a 57-year-old Malad native who ascended to the state's top office in 1977 when then-Gov. Cecil Andrus was appointed Interior secretary, said he kept Idaho's economy afloat while much of the nation staggered under Reaganomics.

But Batt, 55, a Wilder farmer and former state legislator, hammered away at Evans' handling of the state budget and the incumbent's alleged "anti-business" policies. Polls late in the campaign showed Batt narrowly trailing Evans.

In the congressional races, Craig, 37, and Hansen, 52, ran in full support of the Reagan administration's economic policies and urged Idahoans to "stay the course" begun by the president nearly two years ago.

LaRocco, 34, repeatedly attacked Reaganomics and concentrated on his own proposals to revitalize the recession-ravaged First District, while Stallings, a 41-year-old Ricks College professor, picked away at Hansen's style and controversial past.

Mitchell and Leroy, like the gubernatorial candidates, also based their campaigns on how to deal with poor economic conditions and high unemployment.

Rep. Hansen tops Stallings

By MARK SHENEFELT
United Press International

BOISE — Rep. George Hansen's victory in the Second Congressional District race Tuesday showed the Republican's maverick style remained popular with many voters — and that Democratic challenger Richard Stallings could not overcome a campaign financing and name-recognition disadvantage.

With 65 percent of the district's precincts reporting, Hansen had 50,780 votes, or 53 percent, to Stallings' 44,419 votes, or 47 percent.

Hansen secured a seventh term because the voters apparently remained comfortable with his conservative views — no matter how objectionable some of his previous maverick antics may have been.

Another chief factor was his ability to outcollect and outspend Stallings by nearly 2 to 1, a campaign-financing advantage that Hansen has held in most of his races.

The Republican incumbent also managed to stay relatively free of personal controversy during his current term.

Stallings joined his defeated predecessors in failing to capitalize on Hansen's perceived weaknesses. He faced some of the same problems encountered by Diane Bilyeu in 1980 and Stan Kress in 1976 and 1978.

Stallings suffered from a lack of name identification and had to fight upstream against Hansen's close relationship with Republican Party policies, which still are largely viewed with favor in Idaho despite the current problems plaguing President Reagan and his supporters concerning the economy.

And Stallings had to spend a lot of time disassociating himself from the Democratic Party's legacy of welfare, bureaucracy and taxation that was voted down overwhelmingly in Idaho two years ago.

As in his past campaigns, Hansen made points by attacking Eastern liberals, the national news media and government agencies that stir opposition among the Second District's conservative and provincially independent voters.

The 52-year-old former Pocatello school teacher hit hard at the Internal Revenue Service, which he has labeled a tyrannical agency, mercilessly draining the livelihoods of hardworking taxpayers.

But this year, Hansen has had a new whipping boy. With the Washington Public Power Supply System's nuclear plant failures foreshadowing large increases in electricity bills for eastern Idahoans, Hansen accused the federal Bonneville Power Administration of coercing unsuspecting cooperatives and city utilities into financing the doomed projects.

The congressmen's attacks and demands that the government do something about the WPPS crisis gave voters hope they might be saved from footing that bill.

Jones elected as attorney general

BOISE (UPI) — Jerome attorney Jim Jones, the loser in two previous outings for major public office, won the nod of approval from Idaho voters Tuesday to become the state's new Republican attorney general.

Although balloting on the race between Jones and Democrat J.D. Williams was close all night, it appeared unlikely that Williams would be able to close the gap as final tabulations trickled in.

With most of the votes counted, Jones, 40, had 124,000 votes to just 115,438 for Williams — Franklin County's prosecutor.

Jones, a businessman and private attorney, lost congressional races in 1978 and 1980 to fellow Republican George Hansen. But an aggressive campaign and heavier financing gave him the edge over Williams, also 40.

The two men waged a sometimes bitter campaign during the summer and fall.

Williams accused Jones of trying to buy the election with a deep investment of personal funds. He also said the Republican lacked the prosecutorial experience necessary to run the attorney general's office.

But voters apparently believed Jones could manage the large law staff. And they may have been put off by Williams' refusal to take stands on such issues as a right-to-work law in Idaho.

Williams said it would be improper for an attorney general to take partisan stands on those issues.

Democrats gain in House, can't win Senate

By CLAY F. RICHARDS
UPI Political Writer

Republicans retained control of the Senate Tuesday. But Democrats rode voter dissatisfaction with high unemployment and President Reagan's economic program to an even bigger majority in the House. They also battered GOP candidates for governor across the nation.

Despite giving moderate Republican senators a bad scare along the eastern seaboard and some other parts of the nation, the GOP held the control of the Senate it seized two years ago for the first time in a quarter of a century.

Democrats scored a stunning upset in Texas where Attorney General Mark White overcame a $12 million campaign to defeat Gov. Bill Clements. And in Illinois former Sen. Adlai Stevenson clung to a stubborn lead over the favorite, GOP Gov. Jim Thompson.

But for Reagan the worse news came in the House, where he needed to minimize Democratic gains to keep the kind of coalition that has given approval to his conservative programs over the past two years.

Voters rejected Reagan's plea to "Stay the Course" as Democrats easily won recontrol and could double their current 25-vote margin.

In the UPI list of the "Hot 100" closest House races, Democrats had won 36 and Republicans 19 in early returns. CBS projected a possible Democratic pickup of 34 House seats and NBC said the Republicans would lose a net 25 seats.

In the California Senate race, San Diego Mayor Pete Wilson held a narrow lead and threatened to end the political career of maverick Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley, seeking to become the nation's first black elected governor, trailed GOP Attorney General George Deukmejian in the first returns.

The off-year balloting, which attracted only about 38 percent of the eligible voters, could well be the most expensive in the nation's history. Some estimated spending would top the $300 million mark.

The GOP, which looked as though it could lose control of the Senate, rebounded when Sens. Lowell Weicker, the maverick liberal from Connecticutt, Robert Stafford of Vermont, John Chafee of Rhode Island, Malcolm Wallop of Wyoming, John Danforth of Missouri and Orrin Hatch all narrowly swept to victory.

Sen. Harrison Schmitt, R-N.M. was the lone Senate casualty for the GOP and his loss could be evened out if Sen. Howard Cannon, D-Nev., who trailed in early returns, were defeated.

The Republicans suffered their biggest losses in governorships — with incumbents Clements, Charles Thone of Nebraska and Frank White of Arkansas losing. Also, the GOP lost the open governorships of Ohio, Wisconsin and Minnesota.

Democratic Lt. Gov. Mario Cuomo defeated million Louis Lehrman for governor of New York, but the margin was so narrow the Republican challenger demanded a recount.

At 11:59 p.m. MST, the standing of the Senate was:

	DEM	REP
Elected	19	10
Leading	1	3
Holdovers	26	41
New total	46	54
Present	46	54

In the House, where 218 seats are necessary for party control, it was:

	DEM	REP
Elected	222	130
Leading	35	42
New total	257	172
Present	243	192

	DEM	REP
Elected	22	7
Leading	3	3
Holdovers	9	5
New total	34	15
Present	27	23

At stake were 33 Senate races and 433 House contests in all. Two races in Georgia were delayed until Nov. 30 by reapportionment.

There also were 36 elections for governor — with 20 of the seats at stake now held by Republicans and 16 by Democrats.

The 97th Congress, which came into office with Reagan, was divided with Democrats controlling the House 241-192 and the GOP in charge of the Senate 54-46.

In Alabama, George Wallace won his bid for an unprecedented fourth term, despite his paralysis, deafness and segregationist past.

Marines prepare to expand role

By DAVID ZENIAN
United Press International

U.S. Marines geared up Tuesday for a major reassignment into the heavily armed Christian enclave of east Beirut amid signs one Arab state wants to bolster the tri-national peacekeeping force with thousands of its own troops.

Reagan administration officials, however, said there was "no active consideration" to increase the 3,500-man peace force with any Arab troops and that Lebanese efforts to do so probably would not occur without prior consultation with Washington.

Lebanese President Amin Gemayel, who returned from Morocco, won assurances from King Hassan that 2,000 to 20,000 Moroccan soldiers are ready to help French, Italian and U.S. troops restore Lebanese control over its war-torn land, Beirut newspapers said.

Israel immediately rejected the idea and told U.S. envoy Morris Draper the multi-national peaceforce "should" be composed of troops "of countries with whom we have normal and friendly relations." Morocco and Israel do not have diplomatic relations.

Gemayel has been seeking promises from other nations to build the peace force up to 30,000 men until his own Lebanese army is strong enough to maintain peace. U.S. officials gave him a go-ahead to add to the peace force during Gemayel's visit to Washington last month.

Draper, who met with Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir, said he feels "we are making progress" toward withdrawal of 70,000 Israeli, 30,000 Syrian and 10,000 Palestinian fighters in Lebanon.

A senior Israeli official, however, said Lebanon had not agreed to face-to-face meetings. "We have not reached the stage where we can begin negotiations," he said.

On Wednesday, Marine patrols for the first will leave the relatively secure area they have patrolled around Beirut's airport since arriving Sept. 29 and enter east Beirut to help the Lebanese army disarm Phalangist militiamen and clear the area of illegal weapons.

The right-wing Phalange, whose members have been accused of the Sept. 16-18 slaughter of Palestinian refugees in two Beirut camps, is the largest and most heavily armed private militia left in Lebanon. Leftists groups in Moslem west Beirut were disarmed in Lebanese army raids following the Israeli withdrawal from the capital.

No cyanide found in room

By The Chicago Tribune

CHICAGO — No cyanide or poison of any kind was found in the room of a suburban Lombard man wanted for questioning in connection with the deaths of seven Chicago-area persons from cyanide-laced Tylenol, investigators said Tuesday.

Investigators first sought the man in Murray, Ky., where he was believed to be visiting friends. But they now believe he may be en route to Florida where, his Lombard landlord said, he spent some time more than a year ago.

The man first came to the attention of Illinois Attorney General Tyrone Fahner's Tylenol task force last week when investigators received a tip that he might have been involved in the case.

Cyanide poisoning reported

DETROIT (UPI) — A 15-year-old boy was hospitalized in stable condition after eating cyanide-laced grape candy purchased from a store near his home, Redford Township police said Tuesday.

Redford Township police Chief Mike Manoog said the boy, whose name was not released, became violently ill after buying and eating "Now and Later" grape flavored hard candies last Saturday, the day before Halloween.

Tests conducted by Redford Community Hospital showed the illness was "confirmed cyanide poisoning," Manoog said. He said announcement of the poisoning was delayed until lab tests confirmed the presence of cyanide in the candy, as well as the boy's urine and blood.

"We were advised it was a confirmed cyanide poisoning," Manoog said. "We have no other reports (of poisonings) at this time."

Halloween candy burns boy

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — A 2-year-old boy was in serious condition Tuesday with corrosive burns in his throat received, his mother said, when he ate candy he was given while trick-or-treating on Halloween.

Officials at LeBonnheur Children's Medical Center Hospital, where the child was being treated, urged parents in the East Memphis neighborhood not to let their children eat Halloween candy.

Police picked up the bag of candy from which the mother said her son was eating, but no laboratory results were available and authorities said they were unsure what caused the burns.

They refused to identify the victim.

Iran claims new offensive

By United Press International

Iran claimed Tuesday it had launched its second major offensive in a month against Iraq, recapturing 100 square miles of territory, oil wells and strategic outposts seized by Iraq at the start of the 26-month-old Persian Gulf War.

Iraq said it crushed the assault and was punishing Iranian troops in dozens of air strikes.

Iraq said its fighter planes were controlling the skies and had run 187 raids without losing a plane. The air strikes were part of a counter-offensive that has killed 4,000 Iranian soldiers, most in a battle west of the Iranian town of Dezful, the Iraqi News Agency claimed.

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein accused Iran of making "another desperate attempt to invade Iraq."

In Washington, the State Department said the United States "continues to urge a negotiated settlement based upon each country's respect for the principles of territorial integrity and freedom from interference in internal affairs."

Choke hold before court

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Los Angeles Police Department's practice of using a sometimes deadly choke hold was compared before the Supreme Court Tuesday to a game of roulette — "If the ball should fall in your slot, you die."

The case before the justices involves Adolph Lyons, who was stopped in 1977 for a burned out taillight and lost consciousness after police applied the controversial choke hold. He fought the Los Angeles policy, also used in many other major cities, until a lower court barred its use.

Popular outcry resulting from one of the 16 deaths attributed to hold's use prompted the city in May to adopt a six-month moratorium, which ends next week.

While the city asked the high court for its approval of unfettered use of the holds, Michael Mitchell, the lawyer for Lyons — who gasped, choked, spit blood and defecated while the choke hold was being applied — said the threat of its possible use causes black Los Angeles residents, like Lyons, to fear for their lives.

McDonald's withdraws toys

OAK BROOK, Ill. (UPI) — McDonald's Corp. announced Tuesday it is withdrawing all Playmobil toys being handed out for its children's "Happy Meals" promotion because tests show they could be dangerous to children under 3.

The recall followed a complaint last week from the Empire State Consumers' Association that the Playmobil "sheriff" toy barely met federal standards. Spokesman Judy Brahman Lipson said the toy had a small part, a gun, that met requirments by only 1-64th of an inch and posed a clear choking hazard in small children.

Last week a McDonald's spokesman said the toys had been tested extensively and were safe. He said samples were sent to the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission for further testing.

Hatch survives tough fight

By PETER GILLINS
United Press International

SALT LAKE CITY — Conservative Republican Sen. Orrin Hatch, campaigning on Reaganomics and personal appearances by the president, won a second term Tuesday, easily beating Democratic Salt Lake City Mayor Ted Wilson.

Republicans also swept two of the state's three congressional seats and were leading in the race for a third.

Hatch, chairman of the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee, held a 58-41 percent lead over Wilson in early returns. He was also projected as a big winner by two separate voter-exit surveys conducted at polling places by Salt Lake City television stations.

President Reagan played a major roll in the GOP victory. He campaigned twice in the state this fall, including a visit four days before the election. Utah's airways were also flooded with radio and television commercials featuring Reagan endorsing Hatch and other GOP candidates.

"President Reagan's program in place," said Hatch as his victory became apparent. "The key is sticking with what we have been doing."

"Staying the Course" with the president was the theme of the senator's campaign. Voters apparently rallied to the plea, despite a Utah unemployment rate of 8.7 percent, the highest since the great depression.

Hatch also waged the most expensive campaign in Utah History. His campaign manager, Mike Leavitt, said the final spending figure would top $2.7 million, double the amount spent by Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, in 1980, the previous all-time high. Wilson spent about $1.5 million.

During his first term, Hatch became one of the chief spokesmen for the new right in the Senate, fighting labor law reform and sponsoring constitutional amendments to curb abortion and require a balanced federal budget.

Sen. Orrin Hatch wins re-election

Networks say Bradley to lose

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — With some California votes still out, the three major television networks showed Los Angeles mayor Tom Bradley being defeated in his gubernatorial bid.

This would go against pollster Mervin Field's projection Tuesday that Tom Bradley would defeat Republican George Deukmejian for governor, making him the first elected black governor in American history.

The pollster said the Senate race between Democratic Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. and Mayor Pete Wilson of San Diego was too close to call based on early returns and his own findings.

He said Brown was endorsed strongly by women, and may have been helped by a big Democratic turnout. Voters said the choice between Wilson and Brown was frequently described as a choice between the "lesser of two evils," the pollster said on station KNXT.

Field said a survey of voters questioned after they cast their ballots showed Bradley had won. He said the mayor run strongly among white voters as well as minorities.

Also awaiting judgment were three controversial ballot measures — one to require handgun registration, one for mandatory deposits for beverage containers, and the third a call for a mutual freeze on nuclear weapons.

Brown, governor since taking over from Ronald Reagan in 1975 and now the Democratic Senate candidate, went jogging at UCLA with Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., after voting.

"I'm going running for a couple of hours and work this campaign out of my system," said Brown, who trailed in public opinion polls.

"I am reasonably confident, not just based on the polls, but on the feelings I got during the last week. There has been some uneasiness in the other camp," said Wilson.

Bradley was counting on the support of black and Hispanic voters to push him to victory. Both candidates portrayed themselves as tough crime fighters.

Brown pounced with hard-hitting television ads when Wilson suggested that Social Security be voluntary for younger workers.

Wilson charged Brown with appointing judges "soft on crime," and cited his flip-flops on the Mediterranean fruit fly problem and his ties to former radical Tom Hayden.

But Wilson had his own problems. It was disclosed he paid no federal income taxes in 1980 because of an investment in a project to convert cow dung to methane. He also lived for almost two years, without paying rent, in an apartment provided by wealthy developers.

Democrats

Democrats, with computer millionaire Frank Lautenberg, won the open seat in New Jersey by beating GOP grand dame Millicent Fenwick. But Republicans countered when Rep. Paul Trible took the bitterly fought Virginia seat held for half a century by the Byrd dynasty.

In New Mexico, Democratic Attorney General Jeff Bingaman beat Schmitt, the former astronaut. Reagan had visited New Mexico twice on Schmitt's behalf in 1982, including a final stop just four days before the election.

"It's apparent now that our No. 1 priority, which was retaining control of the Senate, will be accomplished," White House chief of staff James Baker told reporters.

He also insisted a needed coalition of House Democrats and Republicans can still be mustered "on selected issues" for Reagan policies.

But UPI Senior Editor Arnold Sawislak, in an election analysis, said the House gains made by the Democrats could spell "stalemate" in Congress for Reagan.

"There seems no chance that the results of this election will enable the Democrats to undo what Reagan was able to accomplish in the first two years of his term, but they might very well be able to stop him from doing more," Sawislak said.

An indication of the voter mood came from ABC exit polling which showed 56 percent disapproved of Reagan's handling of the economy, 64 percent disapproved of his handling of Social Security and 70 percent disapproved of his handling of unemployment which stood at 10.1 percent.

"I think now this election calls for alteration in our economic policy," said Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., a leading Democratic prospect for president in 1984.

In Nebraska, Robert Kerrey, the Vietnam veteran who won the Medal of Honor, unseated Thone. Democrats came close in neighboring Iowa, but GOP Lt. Gov. Terry Branstad finally defeated Roxanne Conlin in her bid to become the state's first woman governor.

Other incumbents who won included Democratic Sens. Lawton Chiles of Florida, Spark Matsunaga of Hawaii, Edward Zorinski of Nebraska, John Melcher of Montana, Quentin Burdick of North Dakota, James Sasser of Tennessee, Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, George Mitchell of Maine, Paul Sarbanes of Maryland and Don Riegle of Michigan and Republicans Richard Lugar, of Indiana and William Roth of Delaware.

In governorships, Democratic incumbents William O'Neill of Connecticut, Joseph Brennan of Maine, Joseph Garrahy of Rhode Island, Richard Lamm of Colorado, Harry Hughes of Maryland, John Carlin of Kansas, Bob Graham of Florida, George Nigh of Oklahoma, Dick Riley of South Carolina and Republicans Lamar Alexander of Tennessee, Richard Thornburgh of Pennsylvania, Richard Snelling of Vermont and William Janklow of South Dakota won.

In one of the hardest fought, and most expensive House contests in the nation, Democratic Rep. Barney Frank defeated GOP Rep. Margaret Heckler in Massachusetts. The two were thrown together through reapportionment, and despite the fact the new district favored Mrs. Heckler, Frank pulled the race out with superior organization and a $1 million warchest.

In early returns, House GOP leader Bob Michel had a narrow lead over Democratic attorney Douglas Stephens in his Peoria, Ill., district.

Senate Republican leader Howard Baker's daughter, Cissy, lost to Democrat Jim Cooper in a House race in Tennessee.

The turnout across the country was fueled by a number of close major races and the presence of 52 statewide initiatives — on issues ranging from the nuclear freeze to gambling — on ballots across the country.

Advocates of a joint Soviet-American freeze on nuclear weapons picked up early support in the District of Columbia, New Jersey and Reno, Nev. Anti-nuclear leaders looked to voting across the nation to give them a supportive majority in Congress.

Hansen

Ada County voters into the Second District also didn't do as much damage to Hansen as Stallings had hoped. Ada County has never been kind to Hansen, but a massive Stallings sweep did not materialize despite the infusion of votes from the politically moderate urban area.

And Hansen was able to prevent a significant defection of voters who may have been drawn to Stallings by his high standing in the Mormon Church — predominant faith in eastern Idaho. Stallings, 41, is a history professor at Mormon-owned Ricks College in Rexburg.

Hansen is also a member of the Mormon Church.

Hansen's past troubles with the federal election commission, the Idaho State Police and the U.S. State Department are apparently fading memories.

Many voters apparently shrugged off Hansen's campaign financing irregularities, his plea of Congressional imunity when he got a speeding ticket, and his two unsanctioned trips to Iran during the U.S hostage crisis.

All 8 constitutional amendments OKd

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho voters approved all eight proposed constitutional amendments on the ballot Tuesday, including measures expanding the term of office for county prosecutors and allowing the issuance of industrial revenue bonds.

Returns late Tuesday indicated all the proposed revisions to the Idaho Constitution would win approval by large margins.

A proposal allowing the Legislature to authorize cities and counties to issue industrial revenue bonds for development projects was favored by 64 percent of the voters with 265 of the state's 893 precincts reporting.

Another measure extending the term of office for local prosecutors from two to four years also enjoyed the support of 64 percent of the electorate.

Seventy percent of those casting ballots believed the justices on the Idaho Supreme Court should be allowed to choose their chief justice. The current law mandates that the judge with the least time remaining in his six-year term be declared chief justice.

An amendment which would remove antiquated language from the Idaho Constitution barring people who believe in "celestial" or "patriarchal" marriage from voting or holding office also passed by a 66-34 percent edge. The original language in the Constitution was aimed at barring Mormons from full participation in Idaho's early politics.

Voters also endorsed by a 65-35 margin a measure requiring that the state Land Board manage Idaho's public lands for "maximum long-term financial return."

And they gave strong support, 70 percent, to a measure allowing the waiver of jury trials in criminal cases.

Homeowner exemption, nuclear measure pass

BOISE (UPI) — Initiatives to expand and make permanent the homeowners' property-tax exemption and require the Legislature to get an advisory vote from the people before banning nuclear power plants gained approval from Idaho voters Tuesday.

The "50-50" initiative, which enacts a permanent 50 percent or $50,000 tax exemption on the value of residential property, received 46,404 ballots, or 57 percent of those cast, with 31 percent of the results tabulated. Some 35,188, or 43 percent, had voted against the measure, which shifts takes from homes to business and utility property.

And a ballot measure billed by its sponsors as "America's first pro-nuclear initiative" was overwhelmingly approved. The vote was 45,890, or 60 percent, to 30,153, or 40 percent, with 31 percent of the ballots recorded.

The initiative is non-binding on the Legislature because it requires only an advisory vote from the people before lawmakers consider anti-nuclear bills. But the initiative's sponsors say it sends a signal deterring lawmakers from passing laws against the construction of nuclear power plants in Idaho.

Voters in addition expressed resounding favor for an initiative allowing denturists, who make dentures, to fit and repair dentures directly for the public. It also sets up a state licensing board for denturists.

20 % above predictions

Voter turnout higher than usual

BOISE (UPI) — Election officials around the state expressed surprise Tuesday at a turnout that generally exceeded official predictions by as much as 20 percentage points.

Twin Falls County clerk Richard Pence said he was "elated" that slightly more than 50 percent of the voters in some local precincts cast ballots — 15 percent more than he had predicted.

Turnout in Bonneville County was "just big, big, big," and could reach 85.5 percent when final figures are calculated, chief election judge Ellen Bingham said.

Officials in Ada County, the state's most populous, said turnout could approach 60 percent, although pre-election estimates had predicted only about 50 percent of the voters would cast ballots.

"I'm delighted, but surprised," Ada County elections official Sandy Koppes said.

In Kootenai County, voting was "pretty busy and constant" because of a number of local races, county clerk Carol Deitz said.

"I've been predicting a high turnout because the great amount of interest generated," she said.

Demos gain big in governorships

White scores upset in Texas

By United Press International

Texas' Democratic Attorney General Mark White scored a stunning upset win over Republican Gov. William Clements Tuesday, wheelchair-bound George Wallace trounced his GOP rival and Democrats rolled to major gains in governorships nationwide.

Former Democratic governor Bill Clinton of Arkansas, fighting for political survival, won his 1980 rematch with Republican Gov. Frank White.

Democrats also ousted GOP governors in Nebraska and Nevada who had campaign help from President Reagan, and regained control of governorships being vacated by retiring Republicans in Minnesota, Ohio and Wisconsin.

In a surprisingly close race, New York Democratic Lt. Gov. Mario Cuomo defeated conservative Republican Lewis Lehrman, who spent $7 million of his own money on the campaign and led with two-thirds of the vote counted before falling behind.

Democrats entered the elections with a slim 27-23 advantage, but reversed four years of Republican triumphs to recapture control of two-thirds of the nation's statehouses.

Only a Republican victory in New Hampshire, where Democratic Gov. Hugh Gallen refused to promise a veto of a sales or income tax, assured the GOP would spoil the Democrats' bid to hold all 20 of their governorships at stake. Gallen narrowly lost to conservative John Sununu.

White rode the Democratic tide to victory despite Clements' $11.8 million re-election campaign warchest and aid on the stump from President Reagan and Vice President George Bush.

With 70 percent of Texas precincts counted, White led Clements with 1,055,528 votes to 895,378.

Wallace, in declining health and nearly deaf at 63, scored a landslide win over arch-conservative Republican Emory Folmar, the mayor of Montgomery who abandoned wearing his pistol during the campaign.

In one of the most closely watched governor's races, Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley counted on sunny weather and a big voter turnout in California to boost his chances of fending off a stiff Republican challenge and becoming the nation's first elected black governor.

Republican Attorney General George Deukmejian led Bradley in early counting of absentee ballots, but Mervin Field's California Poll projected Bradley would be the winner.

In Illinois, former Democratic senator Adlai Stevenson III made a surprisingly strong challenge against Republican Gov. Jim Thompson, a possible presidential candidate. With 71 percent of the precincts counted, Stevenson had 53 percent of the vote but conservative downstate areas were the last to report.

Republicans held governorships in South Dakota, Tennessee, Oregon, Vermont and Pennsylvania, where Gov. Richard Thornburgh turned back the challenge of Rep. Allen Ertel, D-Pa.

In Nebraska, Democrat Robert Kerrey, who lost a leg and won a medal in Vietnam, ousted Gov. Charles Thone. The race was viewed as a political litmus [illegible] President Reagan, who [illegible] campaign help to the Nebraska governor.

Nevada Republican Gov. Robert List, whose administration has faced repeated crises and who also accepted Reagan's campaign help, lost to state Attorney General Richard Bryan.

Leroy, 35, a former Ada County prosecutor, was the nation's youngest attorney general when he took office in 1979, and Mitchell is a 56-year-old veteran lawmaker who has been the chief Democrat on the influential legislative budget panel for several sessions.

Jones and Williams, both 40, engaged in a vitriolic race, criticizing one another for lack of experience or past mistakes. For Jones, this was his third race in four years — his previous two races both failures against Hansen.

Williams, Franklin County's prosecutor, gained the endorsement of most county prosecutors, but his Republican opponent enjoyed an advantage in campaign finances.

Veteran incumbents Joe Williams, 78, and Miss Moon, 56, faced opposition for the first time in many years in their efforts to keep the state's foremost fiscal offices in Democratic hands.

While accountant-businessman Young, 53, toned his campaign to attract voters wanting a new, vigorous auditor, Miner, 52, a former state legislator from St. Anthony and director of the state Pharmacy Board for the past two years, attacked the way Miss Moon has been investing funds from the Idaho treasury.

Winner of one of the uncontested state races was Cenarrusa, a 64-year-old who has been the state's record keeper and chief elections official since 1967. Before that he was speaker of the House, representing Blaine County.

Jerry Evans swamped his Democratic opponent in 1978 and drew no opposition this year, even though his job as steward of Idaho's schools has become increasingly important during the current state revenue and budget crisis.

Sen. Jackson gets 6th term

SEATTLE (UPI) — Washington voters rewarded Democratic Sen. Henry Jackson with a sixth term Tuesday and elected all five Democrats and two Republicans in the state's congressional delegation.

In the new 8th District gained from reapportionment, Republican Rod Chandler held a slim lead over Democrat Beth Bland in the early returns.

But the voters took a frosty view of four statewide issues on the ballot. All were rejected by wide margins in unofficials returns.

Initiative 412 to limit interest rates was swamped by a margin of nearly two-to-one, indicative of the $1.4 million spent by banks and retailers to defeat the measure backed by organized labor.

A proposed constitutional amendment that would permit tax increment financing for community redevelopment projects, was defeated even though there was no organized opposition.

Jackson, 70, powered his way ahead of Republican challenger Douglas Jewett as soon as the polls closed.

With 25 percent of the state's 5,828 precincts reporting, Jackson picked up 70 percent of the vote.

Jackson collected a record $2 million for his re-election campaign and outspent Jewett by a 10-1 margin.

"This has been the finest victory of my career," Jackson said in his victory speech to campaign workers.

The incumbent congressmen, including Democrat Don Bonker in the 3rd District, had no trouble turning back their challengers. Bonker defeated Republican state Sen. J.T. Quigg, in a race that was targeted for turnover by the GOP national committee.

Jewett, 36, was disappointed by his defeat but he was not surprised.

"Jackson was a real tough mountain to climb," Jewett said philosophically. "I salute him for running a campaign that I think was flawless."

Jewett tried without success to tag Jackson with support for the nuclear arms buildup and opposition to the federal balanced budget amendment.

He said he would have liked to debate Jackson even though he never got the chance.

"I at least hope his view of the campaign where voters express their feelings about those issues is positive as well," Jewett added.

Voter turnout under clear weather across the state appeared to be heavier than the 55 percent of the 2.1 million registered voters that had been predicted.

Doc Taylor built reality from idea

The meaning of a milestone event sometimes slips by barely noticed, as if we often are too close to the event itself to grasp its significance.

That's not the case, however, with the good-humored, praise-filled evening last week on which a thousand Magic Valley residents gathered at the College of Southern Idaho campus to honor President James L. Taylor.

Thanks for the idea and execution of the program are due to a number of Magic Valley leaders, including orgnizers Dick Burwell, John Rosholt, Bob Alexander, John Hepworth and Bob Blastock, and Bill Babcock of the college's board of trustees, and a long list of others.

Doc's health has not been good for some time, and in an interview with The Times-News last week, he acknowledged that he has given some thought to retirement.

As far as we are concerned, we think he should stay on as long as he feels able; that is something he has earned by the herculean task he has accomplished here of creating a respectable college out of what was only a dream.

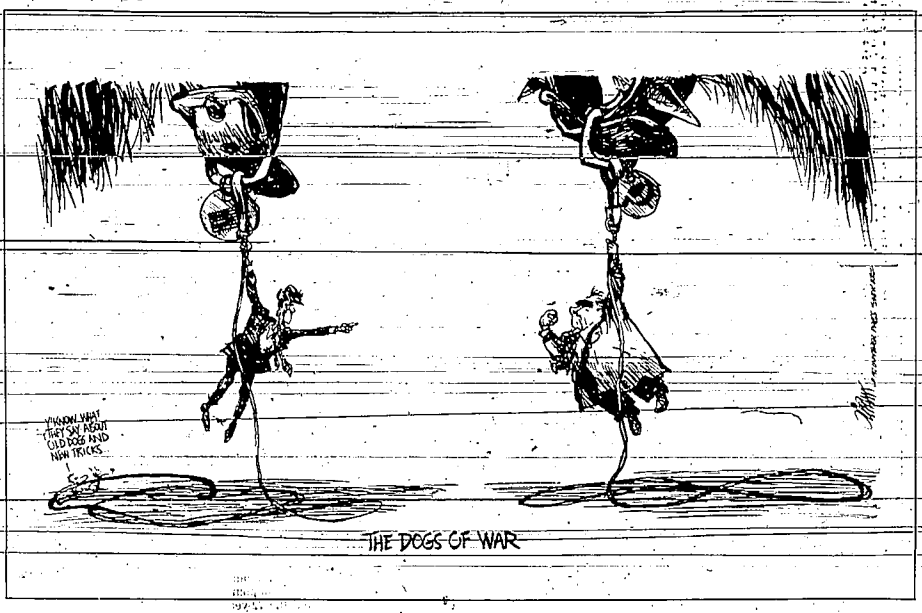

He has done so with the guts of a bandit, shamelessly going to the Legislature and arguing persuasively for funding for red brick, wood, glass, lamps, welding arcs, stainless-steel food-service trays and dozens and dozens of other needs.

He added faculty, staff and books. He tapped geothermal wells for heat. He made sure the school had its liberal-arts program in place to provide students with a sound first two years of a college education.

Doc has been a popular "dictator" of his college, and we have not always agreed with his day-to-day decisions. But he is a man of action who took what was then only a dream and created something tangible and concrete out of it.

And in doing so, he embodies the Magic Valley itself, whose creation out of the desert is still close in the memory of many residents. His hard work is a symbol for what has been accomplished here by many people's sweat and hard work.

In a sense, what was being honored last week at the CSI tribute to Doc Taylor was his will, his energy and his dream. He has given us all a college of which we can be proud. Our heartfelt thanks, Doc.

Who were the greatest Senators?

WASHINGTON — A quarter of a century ago, a special committee undertook and completed a herculean and what, at that time, must have been a most controversial task. The committee was ordered to pick five outstanding members who had served in the U.S. Senate during the first 168 years of its history.

The number was dictated by the presence of just five empty spots in the ornate Senate reception room.

The chairman of that committee was John Kennedy, then a Massachusetts senator already gearing up to run for the presidency. In an article for the New York Times magazine, Kennedy explained the problems faced by the committee in selecting just five.

"In truth, the value of a senator is not so easily determined as the value of a car or a hog, or even that of a public utility bond of a ballplayer," he wrote.

"There are no standards to apply to a senator, no Dun & Bradstreet rating, no scouting reports," Kennedy said.

"To judge his true greatness, particularly in comparison with his fellow senators long after they are all dead, is nearly impossible."

Nevertheless, the committee proceeded. They polled countless historians and political scientists from every state. There were strong urgings for many candidates from other senators, editorial writers and citizens.

Former President Truman, once a senator, sent Kennedy a letter with the names of 39 senators for consideration.

The names presented by the committee to the Senate were Henry Clay of Kentucky, Daniel Webster of Massachusetts, John Calhoun of South Carolina, Robert LaFollette Sr. of Wisconsin and Robert Taft of Ohio.

All five were on Truman's list, although he cautioned that in the case of LaFollette and Taft, "They are too close to us for true perspective."

Only LaFollette and Taft served in the 20th century and Taft had died only a few years earlier.

Although senators had reservations about some of the choices, the Senate agreed on the five recommended without any dissent. But Kennedy did say that he had "the most difficulty excluding" George Norris of Nebraska, Thomas Hart Benton of Missouri and Oliver Ellsworth.

And Sen. Francis Case, R-S.D., said he would not have recommended Calhoun.

"In a 1957 newsletter announcing the selections, Case said, "His views of slavery and nullification would have prevented my voting for him."

Twenty-five years have passed and there is no pressing need for a new round of selections. There still is no space left to hang portraits and the current fad is to name buildings and rooms after outstanding senators.

There are the three office buildings named after Sens. Richard Russell, D-Ga., Everett Dirksen, R-Ill., and Philip Hart, D-Mich.

A main meeting room in the Senate bears the name of Sen. Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., and the Health and Human Services Department building is the Hubert H. Humphrey building.

But those decisions did not entail the study that went into the selections of those who are portrayed in the reception room. Would any of them survive the scrutiny of a committee similar to the one which rendered its verdict a quarter of a century ago? Some might.

Russell, who led the Southern fight against all civil rights laws, might run into the same opposition voiced against Calhoun by Case. Yet in every other way, he must be considered one of the Senate's titans.

Humphrey, who mellowed after a turbulent beginning, was one of the innovative thinkers of modern times. Many of the major social programs originally were developed by him.

Hart, a true champion of the little people and a leader in the fight for civil rights, and Mansfield, who was the Senate's majority leader longer than any other, pioneered the 18-year-old vote and bitterly fought the Vietnam War, would also have strong cases.

Are there any in the Senate now who would pass muster? No, but as Truman cautioned 25 years ago, "They are too close for us for true perspective."

Letters/ Egg-throwing advertisement called "poor judgment and bad taste"

Beans settlement was OK

I recently received another check in the mail in payment for beans I had in the Beans Inc. warehouse in Filer when it burned about three years ago. This gives me 74 percent of the value of those beans.

The law firm representing me received 16 percent of the value over and above my 74 percent, bringing the total to 90 percent of the value of those beans.

While I certainly dislike having to settle for less than 100 percent after three years, it brings to my mind what the producers of a milk processing firm got when that firm ceased operations not long ago.

I would like to commend my law firm and other lawyers concerned for the job they did for the producers. It certainly is unfortunate that producers of raw products have to resort to the law to obtain payment for what is rightfully theirs by the hard work involved in producing food. Had we not gone to this expense, we would have gotten what many others have when other facilities decide to close — nothing.

'We will buy eggs to throw'

On Oct. 28, an ad in The Times-News stated that Swensen's had eggs for sale. "If you feel as if you'd like to put a couple of bullets between the eyes of the hippie poacher who killed two game wardens in front of a witness, but you wouldn't have the gall to plead self-defense, Swensen's suggests throwing a few eggs at the judge and jury."

We would like to know who this open-minded, impartial person is, just in case we ever need someone to make a snap decision for us.

How can anyone who was not at the trial feel that they can make a better judgment than the jury? Remember, the defendant had to be found guilty beyond a reasonable doubt.

We found the ad to be a case of poor judgment and bad taste. If the person who wrote it will reveal himself, we will buy some eggs to throw.

Thanks, Twin Falls people

Frequently in this day and age, we may be led to believe that people have lost the ability and/or desire to show care for others. Recently, however, the family and I came to know many people in the Twin Falls area who made us feel that Twin Falls is a community that cares.

My parents were vacationers in your area when my mother became critically ill. Since it was too precarious to transport her home, we admitted her to Magic Valley Regional Medical Center. The care she received from the doctors, nurses and technicians there would not have been improved upon anywhere else.

Specifically, Dr. Dan Nafziger, Dr. Harry Brumbach, Dr. James Emery and Dr. Harold Wiedemann gave in great and outstanding amounts, both professionally and personally. The same also can be said of the nursing staff on Second North, Third North and the Intensive Care unit. We also are much indebted to Kim Kvale, the patient education coordinator, who helped us all meet the emotional (and other ancillary) demands associated with this personal family crisis. Without them, we wouldn't be enjoying mother's recovery.

Outside of the hospital world, we also found a great responsiveness from such diverse elements as the wonderful people who are associated with Sligar's Resort near Hagerman, and the Magic Carpet Travel Service.

Once again, we all may have met under less than optimal conditions. However, I did want to take the opportunity to thank these many people for helping our family so much.

Social Security problems

What's wrong with the Social Security System? Nothing — if the American public can get it out of the hands of the politicians.

In 1935 and 1936, when the idea was first considered seriously, the American people went for it overwhelmingly. Several of the largest insurance companies petitioned Congress to be custodians of the Old Age Security, stating in their petition that the people involved would pay less than half as much as the government would make them pay, and the returns to the investors would be two to three times as much as the government would pay out.

For the past six or eight years, Congress and the American public have known the SS system would come into serious trouble, and yet Congress has refused to take remedies that would make the system self supporting.

Congress is responsible for the straits the system is in at present. They have added millions of people to the system that have not paid in. Congress has dropped billions of SS monies to educating those who can afford college for their children. In fact, not one penny of the monies ever were intended for education! The Congress has given "credit" to the military even though they did not pay into the fund. Being a "porkbarrel" SS employees can retire after 20 to 30 years with pensions many times greater than the system will pay to those who pay into the fund — and they do not have to wait until they are 65 or 68 years of age. Billions have been taken from the Medicare system to pay for scores of thousands of aliens — such as the 133,000 South Vietnamese!

Millions of illegal aliens are on welfare! Why? Why do the taxpayers have to support any illegal alien who wants to come here? Mexico has enough oil money to take care of their own poor.

Congressmen should start thinking about the American people's future, and I do not mean the wealthy. Congress should use "Christian morality" in place of "congressional ethics" while legislating laws for Americans and America.

Loss of South Hills campsite results in letter, then couples' response

In reading articles concerning the fears and feelings of police officers and Fish and Game officers with the verdict of Claude Dallas, it brings a certain incident to mind.

At the time of this happening, Labor Day weekend 1982, I was going to write The Times-News, but decided to "let sleeping dogs lie." But now that the safety of local police is feared, I thought I could voice my fears regarding the lawmen in our area.

I realize that this only concerns three of them, and you can't judge the actions of a few for the whole force.

At the time we received the following letter, we were camped at the Porcupine Springs campground in the South Hills. We were falsely accused of stealing lawnchairs, and being "worthless individuals."

We were there only to cut wood and enjoy the outdoors, but evidently, we don't have as much right in the forest as do the bowhunters, as that is who delivered this letter that follows:

Dear Sir, Madam, or otherwise worthless individual:

It is with grandest displeasure that we have been forced to witness firsthand the type of human being, (term used in the loosest of fashions) which necessitate an otherwise conscious and co-existent mankind to write down and enforce commonly-recognized rules of conduct.

We do so hope, however, that the presence of the chairs in our occupied campsite did not in the least inconvenience you as you brazenly absconded with same. Furthermore, at least one witness to our occupancy of the site (for more than 24 hours) also wishes to record here their disgust of your action. To coin a phrase, "Rude to the point of disbelief" action.

Remember, if you will, that thief is a term commonly bestowed upon one who steals and we believe that it applies rather well in this instance.

Truly ours,
MICHAEL TURNER
DENNIS CHAMBERS
BON MAULDIN

Now that you've read the letter, what were we to think when this big green camouflaged man walked up to us and handed the letter to us and said, "Here's some [illegible] discussed around the campfire."

No words were exchanged as I think we were so shocked by the letter. Also, how were we to know that our campground wasn't going to be invaded by "green men" with their bows and arrows, or let alone that they were on the local police force.

I could hardly sleep that night, wondering if an arrow would come through our tent. Not only were we scared of the situation, but our kids as well. As the "green man" confronted our son with the letter, before we returned to camp. My son would not discuss the matter with them, and told them "you'd better talk to my dad." All in all, it made for a miserable weekend for all concerned.

Then we get back into town and find out these men that signed the letter were on the Twin Falls Police force. This in no way condones what Claude Dallas has done, but it makes you wonder who you can trust.

P.S.: It was later discovered that one of their own party had taken the lawn chairs.

Editor's note: Michael Turner and Dennis Chambers are detectives with the Twin Falls Police Department. Bob Mauldin is not a Twin Falls police officer. In responses to the letter, Turner and Chambers said they at no time told the parties that they were police officers and that they wrote a note in order to avoid a physical confrontation over the loss of their campsite. The officers say they stand by the letter, in which they say they meant to express frustration about the loss of the campsite. But they add they did not mean to accuse the parties with stealing lawnchairs.

"We were off duty. We were on vacation," Turner told The Times-News. "We're not acting at all for our department and if our actions were judged badly, our intentions were good. If anything, we're sorry if we did so, that we discredited our profession with that letter."

Freeze backers score points

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Advocates of a joint Soviet-American freeze on nuclear weapons picked up strong support Tuesday in the District of Columbia, New Jersey, Philadelphia and Reno, Nev.

Mobilized into the electoral arena after a narrow defeat in the House earlier this year, leaders of the movement looked to voting across the nation to give them a majority in Congress.

Non-binding freeze resolutions were on the ballot in Arizona, California, Massachusetts, Michigan, Montana, New Jersey, North Dakota, Oregon, Rhode Island and the District of Columbia and in Denver, Philadelphia, Miami's Dade County, Chicago's Cook County and Nevada's Washoe County, which includes Reno.

In New Jersey, with half the votes counted, the nuclear freeze was leading 64 percent to 36 percent. The freeze was favored by better than a 2-to-1 margin in the District of Columbia with 45 percent of the precincts counted.

In Philadelphia, with 71 percent of the precincts reporting, the freeze was favored by more than 3-to-1.

Early returns from the Reno area showed that voters gave solid support to an advisory referendum urging a verifiable nuclear arms freeze.

In most areas, the resolutions generated little controversy.

The only question going up to election day in the District of Columbia, Massachusetts and Rhode Island was how large the winning margins would be. Closer votes were expected in California and Arizona.

President Reagan insists a freeze on nuclear arsenals would lock the United States into a position of inferiority to the Soviet Union and remove any incentive for the Soviets to negotiate arms reductions. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger vigorously denounced the proposal in the closing days of the campaign.

The House rejected a pro-freeze resolution on a 202-204 vote last spring. The issue never reached the Senate floor.

PEACE PAC, a political action committee including a number of anti-nuclear, peace and labor groups, targeted for defeat what it called "the doomsday dozen" — 12 House members it labeled too hawkish on defense issues.

Four of those congressmen had been re-elected late Tuesday night, but Rep. John LeBoutillier, R-N.Y., was defeated by Robert Mrazek, who received active support from SANE PAC, the political action arm of the National Committee for a Sane Nuclear Policy.

Randall Forsberg, a leader in the nuclear freeze movement, told NBC, "I think what we're looking forward to in 1983 is not just passing a resolution ... but putting pressure on the administration to come up with some meaningful arms control in Geneva."

Cuomo wins in New York

NEW YORK (UPI) — Sen. Daniel Moynihan — easily won re-election Tuesday as Democrat Lt. Gov. Mario Cuomo defeated millionaire Republican Lewis Lehrman to become New York's 52nd governor.

Moynihan won his second six-year term by defeating conservative Republican Assemblywoman Florence Sullivan, a vigorous supporter of President Reagan's economic policies who suffered from a lack of funds and little voter recognition throughout her campaign.

With 37 percent of the vote counted, Moynihan led 64 percent to 36 percent, or 1,124,276 to 652,188.

The balloting for governor capped a long struggle by both men, each of whom began eyeing the Executive Mansion even before Gov. Hugh Carey decided in January not to seek a third term.

New Yorkers also selected 34 House members — a drop of five due to reapportionment — as well as a number of local officials.

Most attention focused on the sometimes bitter contest for governor, viewed by many as a clear-cut referendum on President Reagan's economic policies.

Lehrman, a millionaire advocate of supply-side economics, proposed massive state tax cuts to stimulate the economy. Cuomo attacked Lehrman's plans as an extension of Reaganomics.

Lehrman pumped about $13 million into his effort, including about $9 million of his own money, while aides said Cuomo spent about $4.6 million through contributions, with a surplus of about $750,000.

GOP holds Rhode Island seat

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — Republican Sen. John Chafee won a second term Tuesday, narrowly defeating Democrat Julius Michaelson in a tough challenge that focused on the incumbent's GOP link to the Reagan White House.

Chafee, born into a family of Yankee industrialists, pulled away from Michaelson 165,954 to 157,393 with 98 percent of the machine votes tallied and 14,647 absentee ballots uncounted in the nation's smallest state.

Michaelson, a two-term former attorney general with strong labor backing, focused his campaign on Chafee's alleged allegiance to Reaganomics and specific votes against Social Security. But Chafee, a popular former Navy secretary with a moderate to liberal voting record, fought back.

Gov. J. Joseph Garrahy led Democrats to re-election victories in statewide offices, collecting 76 percent of the vote against three low-key challengers. Republican unknown Vincent Marzullo collected just 23 percent of the vote.

There were no surprises in the state's two congressional contests. Incumbents Fernand St Germain, D-R.I., and Claudine Schneider, R-R.I., won re-election by comfortable margins.

St Germain, House Banking chairman, won a 12th term in defeating Republican Burton Stallwood and Independent Gertrude Jayne Fowler. In the 1st District, Mrs. Schneider outdistanced Democrat James Aukerman, who unsuccessfully tried to link Mrs. Schneider to Reaganomics.

Moffett beats Rep. Fenwick

MILLICENT FENWICK
Loses Senate bid

TRENTON, N.J. (UPI) — Democrat Frank Lautenberg rode the crest of anti-Republican sentiment Tuesday to score a political upset and defeat Republican Rep. Millicent Fenwick in the U.S. Senate race.

With 82 percent of the vote in, the multimillionaire computer executive had 52 percent of the tally, or 913,154 votes, to 48 percent, or 843,169 votes, for the four-term congresswoman, a pipe-smoking grandmother who inspired the Doonesbury cartoon character Lacey Davenport.

Despite Mrs. Fenwick's performance in key Republican counties, Lautenberg was able to offset that margin by winning heavily in other areas.

Earlier in the evening, Mrs. Fenwick attributed Lautenberg's showing to high unemployment, which she termed "painful," and to the massive amounts of money the Democrat spent to win the seat.

Lautenberg, New Jersey's first Jewish senator, handed Mrs. Fenwick her first political loss.

President Reagan's economic policies were at the heart of the bitter race between the two millionaires.

Lautenberg, a textile worker's son who struck it rich as co-founder and chairman of Automatic Data Processing Inc., will replace Republican Nicholas Brady, appointed to the Senate after Democrat Harrison Williams Jr. resigned in the wake of his Abscam conviction.

From the start of the campaign, when Mrs. Fenwick led by 18 points, Lautenberg, 58, painted the 72-year-old congresswoman as a faithful Reagan ally and an opponent of social programs.

Weicker survives strong challenge

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Maverick Sen. Lowell Weicker, a nuisance to the Reagan administration but important to GOP control of the Senate, Tuesday narrowly defeated Democratic Rep. Toby Moffett to win re-election to a third term.

Weicker, who voted against President Reagan more than any other Republican in the Senate, rode a campaign theme of an independent thinker to a slim victory over Moffett, a liberal four-term congressman.

The close race between Weicker and Moffett was an apparent rebuke of New Right thinking in Connecticut as Lucien DiFazio, who had campaigned on a theme of devotion to Reagan policies, trailed with only 3 percent of the vote.

With 95 percent of the state's 737 precincts reported, Weicker had 510,587 votes, or 51 percent, to 464,747 votes, or 46 percent for Moffett. DiFazio had 27,842 votes.

The victory kept intact Weicker's record of never having lost an election as well as his position as being the only Republican re-elected to statewide office in Democratic Connecticut in more than a quarter century.

Democratic Gov. William O'Neill, a tavern owner who became the state's chief executive when cancer forced the late Ella Grasso to resign, defeated former state Senate Republican leader Lewis Rome.

With 95 percent of the vote counted, O'Neill had 53 percent, or 535,118 votes, to 47 percent, or 465,177 votes, for Rome, who centered his campaign on charges of corruption and mismanagment in state government under O'Neill.

In the 6th District race for Moffett's seat, Republican state Sen. Nancy L. Johnson narrowly defeated Democratic state Sen. William Curry, a liberal who had labeled the contest a referendum on Reagan policies.

Democrats win 2 races in Ohio

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — Democrat Richard Celeste, a former Peace Corps director, won the governor's race Tuesday in recession-plagued Ohio, and Democratic Sen. Howard Metzenbaum handily won a second term.

Both Celeste and Metzenbaum capitalized on Ohio's 12.3 percent unemployment, bringing out a strong Democratic vote and mopping up in the steel, coal and other industrial areas. They won despite a late visit by President Reagan on behalf of Republican candidates.

Celeste, who narrowly lost the governor's race in 1978, defeated Republican Rep. Clarence Brown, a 17-year congressman who had never lost an election before. Metzenbaum beat Paul Pfeifer, a Republican state senator.

Celeste and Metzenbaum campaigned from a platform based on Ohio's above-average unemployment rate, calling for changes in Reagan administration economic policies they said hurt the jobless, the poor and the elderly.

Celeste, 44, a Yale graduate and a Kennedy family backer, served as Ohio's lieutenant governor 1975-79. He headed the Peace Corps under President Carter.

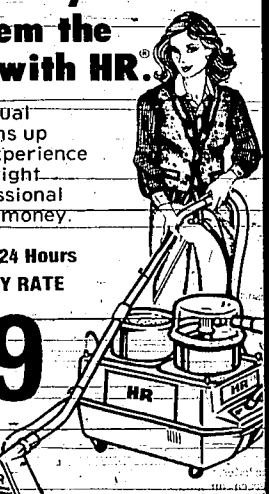

Celeste urged Ohio voters to "send the president a message from the heartland of America — give us back our jobs."

Brown, 55, whose father was a congressman from 1938-65, staunchly backed Reagan administration economic policies, and was a leader in the administration's "New Federalism" program to delegate more responsibility to the states.

Metzenbaum, 65, portrayed himself as a friend of the consumer and working man, and criticized Reagan's economic policies as "harsh" and "cruel." A self-made millionaire, he frequently battled big oil companies and the Defense Department.

Pfeifer, 40, a state senator for six years, spent $600,000 from national Republican Party coffers in his bid to unseat Metzenbaum, who he said is too liberal for Ohio.

Daily Horoscope

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day and evening when you accomplish little or nothing of value by a critical attitude. Become more familiar with new methods. A new course of action could be most successful.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19): Think kindly of your best friends and be of assistance where most needed. Taking any unnecessary risks could prove costly.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20): Plan how to cut down on expenses and command a greater income so that you can operate more efficiently in the days ahead.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Don't run away from your responsibilities or you could have others that are not so promising. Be more optimistic.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Try not to act in an irrational manner about anything today, especially where important business matters are concerned.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Fine day for making plans that could bring more abundance in the days ahead. Make sure to exercise caution in travel.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Make certain you handle routine tasks efficiently at this time. Use tried and true methods for advancing in career activities.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): You have fine ideas that need more study before putting them in operation. Be more optimistic about the future.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Much care must be exercised in business dealings today to avoid future trouble. Show more affection for loved one.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Listen to the suggestions of associates and cooperate more with them. Relax at home tonight.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Don't let intruders keep you from doing your work in an efficient manner. Consult an expert for advice you need.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Although the actions of others could disturb you, keep busy at own affairs for best results. Show others you have wisdom.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20): Try to take in stride any annoyances that come your way. A good time to make plans to add to present security.

IF YOUR CHILD WAS BORN TODAY, he or she must be taught ethical standards early in life, otherwise your progeny could go off in the wrong direction. Much success can be attained if the right education is provided. Be sure to give good religious training.

Boll Weevils win in South

By WILLIAM COTTERELL
United Press International

George Wallace won an unprecedented fourth term as governor of Alabama Tuesday, supported by the blacks he once scorned, and Sen. John Stennis of Mississippi led most conservative "Boll Weevil" Democrats to victories across the South.

Republicans lost seats in Tennessee, North Carolina and Virginia, and appeared to be losing another in North Carolina. But in general, incumbents won re-election and there were few changes.

Florida voters returned Gov. Bob Graham and Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., to office over token Republican opposition, and Gov. Dick Riley of South Carolina was re-elected resoundingly.

In Tennessee, Republican Gov. Lamar Alexander and Democratic Sen. Jim Sasser were re-elected. Senate Republican leader Howard Baker's daughter Cissy Baker lost her bid for Congress.

Democrat Joe Frank Harris won the governorship of Georgia.

Wallace, who made his national reputation boasting there was not "a dime's worth of difference" between the two parties, swamped Republican Mayor Emory Folmar to win his record fourth term in the statehouse.

Stennis, a favorite of GOP presidents dating back to Eisenhower, won his seventh term at the age of 81 over Republican Haley Barbour.

Republican Rep. Paul Trible won the seat of retiring Virginia Sen. Harry Byrd Jr., the only Independent in the Senate. Trible defeated Democratic Lt. Gov. Richard Davis.

Personal political problems unrelated to their House votes, seemed the chief woe of the few "Boll Weevils" facing defeat.

Rep. Billy Lee Evans, a six-year veteran from Georgia, was retired in the Democratic primary by Georgia State Rep. Roy Rowland of Dublin, who was unopposed in the general election. Evans was hurt not by his pro-Reagan votes but by revelation that he put his ex-wife on the congressional payroll.

North Carolina Rep. Ike Andrews, a 10-year veteran held a slight lead despite a recent guilty plea to drunken driving that Democrats feared would damage his chances for re-election.

GEORGE WALLACE
Wins fourth term

Wallace gets black votes

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI) — George Wallace, once-fiery segregationist suddenly popular among blacks, won election Tuesday to a record fourth term as Alabama's governor, sinking the strongest Republican bid of the century for the office.

Wallace, 63, confined to a wheelchair and and nearly deaf, defeated Emory Folmar, 52, who tried to become the state's first GOP governor since 1874.

Folmar, the arch-conservative, pistol-carrying mayor of Montgomery, refused to concede.

With 1,752 of 5,205 precincts, 34 percent, reporting, Wallace had 259,309 votes, 62 percent, to 162,100 for Folmar.

Five incumbent congressmen won re-election, and two, both Republicans, were involved in close races.

Wallace, mellowed from the firehorse who vowed "segregation forever" in 1963, drew a heavy black vote in the Democratic primaries.

Alabama's 14.3 percent unemployment rate and Wallace's health were big campaign issues.

Wallace, paralyzed from the waist down since he was shot by a would-be assassin while campaigning for president in 1972, insisted he was in good health.

Wallace left office in 1979 because he was constitutionally prohibited from seeking re-election. He successfully ran his first wife, Lurleen, in his place in 1966 when a balky Legislature refused to allow him to succeed himself.

Cornelia Wallace, who divorced him in 1978, endorsed Folmar. Wallace and his third wife, Lisa, were married in 1981.

Bentsen wins

DALLAS (UPI) — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, easily defeated veteran Republican Rep. Jim Collins while Democratic challenger Mark White took a narrow lead over GOP Gov. William Clement Tuesday in an election that loomed as a turning point for the Republican party in Texas.

With 22 percent of the vote counted in the Senate race, Bentsen had 311,704 votes or 57 percent to 239,720 votes or 43 percent for Collins.

In the see-saw governor's race, with 26 percent of the vote tabulated, White moved ahead with 348,416 votes or 51 percent to 339,102 votes or 49 percent for Clements.

Collins refused to concede, saying he would not make a statement until 40 percent of the vote was counted. "Unless Lloyd knows something I don't know, I'd be surprised if he thinks he's won," Collins said at his ranch near Dallas.

Dollar exchange legal now

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Mexico will legalize the free-market exchange of dollars along the U.S. border today in an attempt to shore up the region's shattered economy, the Bank of Mexico announced.

The new decree, which will allow special exchange houses to buy and sell dollars at the free-market rate, is seen as a concession that exchange controls imposed Sept. 1 have not stopped the flow of dollars out of Mexico.

Mexico set the exchange rate at 70 pesos to the U.S. dollar but stopped selling dollars to its residents.

The bank said the decree is aimed at convincing Mexican residents of the border region and American tourists to buy and sell their dollars in Mexico.

Guatemalan refugees flee

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Guatemalan troops crossed into Mexico and raided a refugee camp where they believed leftist guerrillas were hiding, forcing terrified Guatemalan refugees to flee into the jungle, a Catholic priest said Tuesday.

The priest, who works with a refugee commission in San Cristobal de las Casas in the southern Mexican state of Chiapas, said in a telephone interview the raid took place Monday.

The camp holds some 700 Guatemalans who say they left their country because they feared the army, which has been carrying out search and destroy operations against leftist guerrillas and their sympathizers.

The priest said the troops searched the camp and surrounding area for about an hour, but left after finding it abandoned.

There are an estimated 25,000 Guatemalan refugees in the border region.

Thais to receive arms aid

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger Tuesday promised more U.S. military aid to Thailand and said he supports a diplomatic effort to restore Cambodian sovereignty by ridding it of Vietnamese troops.

Weinberger met with Thai leaders on the second stop of an 11-day, five-nation tour of Asia and the Pacific.

Weinberger and Prime Minister Gen. Prem Tinsulanonda held a two-hour working lunch after which the Thai leader said the United States would increase its credits to Thailand by $12.2 million for military purchases.

No strikes, Poles advised

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — Polish military authorities Tuesday launched a propaganda campaign warning workers against participating in strikes and demonstrations called by the underground Solidarity union for Nov. 10.

Government posters appealing to workers to boycott the strikes appeared in Warsaw and government controlled newspapers warned that a new round of demonstrations could lead to bloodshed.

Solidarity's underground command has called for an 8-hour nationwide strike followed by demonstrations Nov. 10 to mark the second anniversary of the outlawed union's legal registration.

Canadian convicts give up

STONY MOUNTAIN, Manitoba (UPI) — Four convicts surrendered peacefully Tuesday and released unharmed two prison guards they had taken hostage after a Halloween party at Stony Mountain Penitentiary.

Prison guards John Mason, 38, and Ed Mowdy, 39, were unharmed during the 39 hours they were held captive in a maximum-security cellblock with 33 other inmates, prison spokesman Russ McGill said.

The four convicts were whisked away from the prison in a speeding cavalcade of three police cruisers and two ambulances. Police said only that they would be charged in the hostage-taking and transferred to a maximum-security prison in Edmonton.

Britain gets new TV link

LONDON (UPI) — Britain got a second commercial television channel Tuesday with fillers where the commercials should be.

Britain took 18 years to move from three channels to Channel Four, an evening-only service featuring American football that went on the air with no opening fanfare. The new channel's first program was a quiz show.

"I am confident that viewers of differing tastes will find plenty to enjoy in what we have to offer," said Channel Four boss Jeremy Isaacs.

Berlin squatters rampage

BERLIN (UPI) — Rampaging squatters angered over police evictions Tuesday burned 10 vehicles and smashed windows in 19 stores, offices and banks throughout West Berlin, a police spokesman said.

Police said they do not know how many protesters were involved in the incidents scattered throughout the city. The night-long violence was the third riot in less than two weeks.

The spokesman said police arrested 11 people, five of whom remained in police custody.

The rampage followed the eviction late Monday of 30 squatters from two appartment houses in the Kreuzberg district. Police said they acted because the residents were "prone to criminality."

Miners reject call to strike

LONDON (UPI) — Britain's 200,000 coal miners Tuesday rejected their union's call for a nationwide strike in support of a 26 percent pay raise and instead voted to accept an 8 percent basic wage increase.

The 3-2 margin of the vote rejecting the strike was a decisive rebuff for the union's militant leader, Arthur Scargill.

Miners voted 125,233 to 81,592 against strike action and to accept the 8 percent offer of the state-run National Coal Board. The coal board pay offer will raise miners' weekly wages by between $12.24 and $18.70. The increase boosts the weekly wage of the highest-paid miners to around $306.

Sadat's kin denies charges

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — The jailed younger brother of the late President Anwar Sadat denied in an interview published Tuesday that he illegally profited through blackmarketeering, extortion and political corruption.

Esmat Sadat, 57, told the opposition newspaper Al Sahaab he was a self-made man and rejected accusations he had used the late president's name to acquire wealth illegally.

"My name is better than this," he said.

Sadat was arrested Friday on orders of Egyptian prosecutors who charged him with blackmarketeering, illegal seizure of state property, extortion and political corruption.

U.S. backs Falklands talks

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — In an apparent bid to mend fences before President Reagan visits Latin America, the U.S. mission to the United Nations Tuesday said it will back a call — over British objections — for talks on Falkland Islands sovereignty.

A source at the U.S. mission implied the decision to support the move, a Latin American resolution called "objectionable" by British Ambassador Sir John Thomson, was made by Reagan himself.

"The United States will support the resolution as it is," the source said of the initiative calling for negotiation between Britain and Argentina on sovereignty over the South Atlantic archipelago.

Pope lambasts abortion, birth control

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — Pope John Paul II Tuesday warned that abortion undermines "the very foundations of society," his most scathing condemnation ever of the operation that Spain's new Socialist government may soon approve.

In an outdoor mass before some 750,000 people in central Madrid, the pontiff also denounced birth control and divorce. The address came after he lauded Spain's fledgling democracy, which last week led to the election of its first Socialist government in 46 years.

"One can never legalize the death of an innocent," John Paul said of abortion, his voice rising with emotion to a near shout.

"I am speaking of the absolute respect for human life that no person or institution, private or public, can ignore," he said.

"For this reason, whoever denies the right to life to the most innocent and weak human beings, to human beings conceived but not yet born, commits a grave violation of the moral order," he said.

"This would undermine the very foundations of society."

Felipe Gonzalez, the leader of the Socialist Party who is scheduled to become prime minister in December, has called for legalization of abortion when childbirth would endanger a mother's life, or in cases of rape.

The 40-year-old Gonzalez, a self-avowed agnostic, won a landslide victory in national elections last Thursday. He will head the first Socialist government in Spain since the 1936-1939 Civil War.

John Paul was almost as vehement in condemning birth control pills, which already are freely available in Spain even though 95 percent of the nation is Roman Catholic.

Bull market charges higher

By FRANK W. SLUSSER
United Press International

NEW YORK — The Dow Jones industrial average climbed into position to challenge its all-time highs Tuesday.

The advance came in a broad stock market rally based on Wall Street's belief Republicans would not be routed in the elections.

Trading topped the 100 million-share mark for the 18th time in the surge that indicated Wall Street also is confident the Federal Reserve soon will lower its discount rate and drive interest rates lower.

The Dow Jones industrial average of 30 blue-chip stocks, which gained 13.98 points Monday in a rebound from last week's drubbing, climbed 16.38 to 1,022.08.

Late profit taking knocked it down from its trading high of 1,032. But the surprising rallies Monday and Tuesday convinced many analysts the widely followed average will break through its all-time peak of 1,051.70 set Jan. 11, 1973.

Several analysts pointed out the market historically has risen after mid-term elections regardless of who wins.

The New York Stock Exchange index rose 1.20 to 79.12 and the price of an average share increased 49 cents. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index jumped 2.02 to 137.49.

Advances routed declines 1,347-359 among the 1,964 issues traded.

Big Board volume totaled 104,770,000 shares, up from the 73,530,000 traded Monday. The turnover was especially impressive since many banks and businesses were closed for election day.

Analysts said the stock market has been buoyed by the recent strength in bonds that was sparked by growing speculation the Fed will cut its discount rate since loan demand has fallen.

In the news background, the government reported September factory orders rose 0.7 percent and new home sales jumped 23.7 percent after posting declines the month before.

Composite volume of NYSE issues listed on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter totaled 121,347,040 shares, up from the 86,196,020 traded Monday.

The American Stock Exchange index soared 6.89 to 328.62 and the price of a share rose 28 cents. Advances topped declines 485-202 among the 841 issues traded. Composite volume totaled 12,847,400 shares compared with 9,364,500 traded Monday.

The National Association of Securities Dealers NASDAQ index of OTC stocks gained 3.13 to 217.65, a 1982 high.

On the trading floor, blue-chip Sears, Roebuck, a big winner in recent sessions, was the most active NYSE-listed issue, off ¾ to 29¼.

Sony Corp. followed, unchanged at 13⅞.

Federal National Mortgage, which is sensitive to interest rates and which has been recommended by several analysts, was the third most active issue, up ⅞ to 21¼.

IBM, which has been a leader since the rally began in August, was fourth on the active list, up ⅜ to 81⅞.

Among the blue-chip leaders, Procter & Gamble rose 4⅞ to 113⅛, Allied Corp. 1 to 35⅝, Aluminum Co. of America ⅞ to 27⅞, General Electric 1 to 88⅞, General Foods 1⅞ to 45⅝ and Owens Illinois ⅞ to 26¼.

Some airlines were strong as many registered increased October traffic. AMR Corp., parent of American Airlines, rose ½ to 18⅞, UAL Inc. 1 to 28½ and Delta 1½ to 35.

Chrysler, which jumped ⅞ point Monday, rose another ⅛ to 11½ in heavy trading. The stock has climbed since the United Auto Workers voted last week not to strike.

Hewlett-Packard added ⅞ to 64⅞. The company introduced two new personal computers that don't occupy much space.

On the Amex, Dome Petroleum was the most active issue, up ⅛ to 2 7-16 with a block of one million shares at 2¼. Wang Laboratories class B followed, up ¼ to 49¼. Champion Home Builders was third, off ⅛ to 4¼.

Recession keeps lid on orders

WASHINGTON (UPI) — New factory orders remained locked in the grip of recession in September, expanding just 0.7 percent and reaching only their second lowest monthly total of the year, the Commerce Department said Tuesday.

The improvement was primarily in orders for goods being produced for immediate consumption and entirely missed the hard-hit auto industry.

But some significant categories of machinery orders showed surprisingly strong increases.

The value of new orders for manufactured goods reached $155.5 billion in September, rebounding only slightly from August's revised 2.65 percent drop, the department said.

The only month this year with a smaller total of orders than September was January when severe weather combined with the recession to hold the total to just $154.5 billion.

The closely watched category of durable goods orders dropped 0.07 percent, a turnaround in revision from the government's advance report 11 days ago that showed an increase of 0.2 percent.

The decline was caused by a 20.2 percent drop in defense orders which fluctuate widely from month to month and are usually irrelevant in assessing the nation's short term business trends.

Non-defense capital goods orders were up 4.7 percent.

$200 million aid plan for Lebanon

Knight-Ridder Newspapers

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration has secretly told Congress of tentative plans for a $185 million to $235 million emergency military aid program for beleaguered Lebanon.

The administration also has informed Congress that the role of U.S. Marines in Lebanon may be expanded soon, to include protection of the strategic Beirut-Damascus highway.

Details of the program under consideration, which have been carefully guarded, were obtained Tuesday from congressional sources. Announcements are expected soon if key congressional power brokers approve the plan.

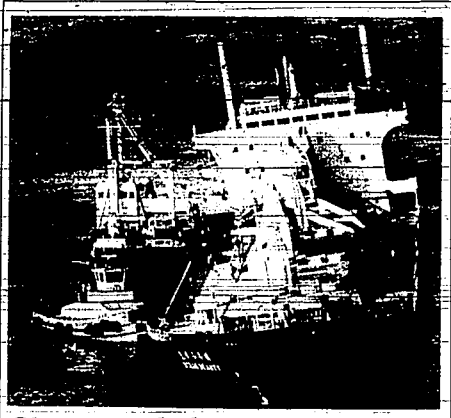

The first phase of the two-phase aid program would involve rebuilding 16 battalions of the Lebanese army with U.S. M-48 tanks, armored personnel carriers, communications gear and a variety of small arms.

That phase would begin immediately, last through February and cost about $85 million, members of Congress have been told.

The second phase, to begin in February, would involve creating four new battalions of the Lebanese army from scratch. It would enlarge the army, which is believed to have an effective fighting strength of about 13,000 personnel, by about 4,000 to 5,000.

This phase would cost between $100 and $150 million, but there is a possibility some other countries, perhaps France, might pick up part of the check.

A team of approximately 50 U.S. personnel would be set up for three or four months to help teach the Lebanese army how to use the U.S. equipment it would receive in both phases.

Utah cancer study called inaccurate

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — A study that shows an unusually high rate of cancer among Mormons living downwind from A-bomb tests is inaccurate because many cases were not documented, a physician testified Tuesday.

"As chairman of the state's cancer quackery committee, I realize there are a great many doctors who make cancer diagnoses liberally," Dr. Charles Smart, chief surgeon at LDS Hospital in Salt Lake City, testified in U.S. District Court.

Smart is a witness for the federal government, which is fighting a multimillion dollar damage claim by people who contend radioactive fallout from A-bomb tests caused cancer in their families.

The suit has 24 plaintiffs representing 1,200 people who lived Utah, Nevada and Arizona in the downwind fallout path from more than 100 A-bomb blasts in the 1950s and 1960s.

Smart said a study by Dr. Carl Johnson of Denver mistakenly concluded Mormons exposed to radioactive fallout in southern Utah had a higher cancer rate than other Mormons not in the fallout path.

Pipeline on agenda for talks

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Italian Prime Minister Giovanni Spadolini arrived in Washington Tuesday for talks with President Reagan on relations strained by Soviet pipeline sanctions, the Middle East and other world issues.

Spadolini is scheduled to meet Secretary of State George Shultz this morning at the residence of Italian Ambassador Renaldo Petrignani before going to the White House to meet with Reagan.

The prime minister and Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo flew from New York to Andrews Air Force Base aboard a U.S. presidential jet, arriving just after 2:30 p.m. MST. They had flown from Rome aboard a regularly scheduled flight of the Italian airline Alitalia.

At a cabinet meeting in Rome Friday, Spadolini said he would discuss with Reagan the sanctions imposed on European firms that supplied high technology equipment to the Soviet Union for construction of a 3,500-mile natural gas pipeline.

Nuclear foes splash blood at Pentagon

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Anti-nuclear demonstrators, their faces powdered white, splattered human blood and acid on the steps of the Pentagon Tuesday and chained themselves to the building's entrances in an Election Day protest.

A spokesman for the Federal Protective Service said 29 of an estimated 100 demonstrators were arrested on charges of blocking access to a government facility before the rally broke up just before noon.

"Today we've been voting with our lives, with civil disobedience, because voting at the ballot box has proved ineffective in stopping the arms race," said Peter DeMott, a spokesman for a coalition of peace groups that staged the protest.

Those arrested were fingerprinted in the Pentagon and given citations to appear in court Nov. 23, said Roger Stewart, spokesman for the building protection detail of 35 officers. They were then released.

DeMott, 35, of Omaha, Neb., said two of the arrested demonstrators had splattered human blood on the Pentagon steps and a third spilled acid at an entrance. He said the blood was donated by the protesters.

Crash kills evangelist

NORMANGEE, Texas (UPI) — Evangelist Lester Roloff, 68, who gained national attention in his battle against state licensing of his homes for girls, was killed Tuesday with four other people in the crash of a light plane.

Leon County Justice of the Peace Teddy Rodell said Roloff and four women were killed when the plan crashed in a pasture three miles north of Normangee in Leon County, midway between Houston and Dallas.

Federal Aviation Administration spokesman George Burlage said there were thunderstorms in the area when the FAA Houston flight control center lost Roloff's plane from its radar at 10:18 a.m.

"We've not established a cause for the crash," he said.

Hanford reactor shuts self down

HANFORD, Wash. (UPI) — Hanford's dual-purpose N-reactor shut down automatically Tuesday morning because of an apparent electrical malfunction in a control system.

A spokesman for the plant's operator, UNC Nuclear Industries, said the reactor is expected to be back in service within 48 hours.

The N-reactor produces plutonium and other nuclear materials for the U.S. Department of Energy.

RONALD BRUCE
Headed for 4-year term

Bruce beats Chisholm

RUPERT — Ronald Bruce appeared headed late Tuesday for election to a four-year term as Minidoka County's resident Fifth District Court judge.

With all the eight Magic Valley counties reporting, Bruce led opponent Don Chisholm, Rupert's city attorney, 16,213 votes, or 53.8 percent, to 13,938 votes, or 46.2 percent.

Results for Jerome, Lincoln and Gooding counties were incomplete at press time, but the trend toward Bruce's victory appeared well-established in each of the counties.

Bruce captured seven of the eight counties that comprise the Fifth Judicial District, winning 54 percent or better in Twin Falls, Camas, Blaine, Gooding, Lincoln, Jerome and Minidoka counties. Chisholm picked up 60 percent of the vote in Cassia County.

The incumbent judge probably was unaware of his victory, however.

Contacted earlier in the day, Bruce said he planned to spend election night in the Pocatello area with family and friends, secluded from reporters and election results.

He said he was glad the campaign was over, and he indicated he would make changes if elected.

"Of course, I would do my best to repair the damage that's been done to this judicial office because of its being subjected to political campaigning, and will try seriously to consider the criticisms that have been made against me in a constructive way, so that I may achieve the personal growth necessary to give the people of this area and the Magic Valley the quality of service that they deserve," Bruce said.

Bruce was appointed district court judge last year, following the retirement of Judge Sherman Bellwood. The race against him marked the first challenge of a sitting Fifth District judge in 20 years.

The race was a particularly heated campaign that began last spring when both Chisholm and Burley magistrate Judge Nathan Higer challenged Bruce in the May primary.

No candidate won a majority in the primary, requiring the two top vote-getters, Bruce and Chisholm, into the unusual run-off.

The thrust of the campaign put Chisholm on the attack, accusing Bruce of taking too long in issuing decisions, engaging in unusual courtroom procedures, and being unqualified for the job. Bruce defended his record and accused Chisholm of distorting the record.

It was all smiles at Republican headquarters, as Mary Elizabeth Jones and Donna Scott reacted to Scott's victory

Party backing brings Scott victory

TWIN FALLS — The candidates called it a "horse race," but in the end, the District 25 House contest wasn't all that close.

Republican Donna Scott rode solid party backing to an unexpectedly easy win Tuesday over independent candidate Chris Talkington.

Part of the reason, speculated Talkington, the 36-year-old mayor of Twin Falls, was his lack of party support. Twin Falls voters have elected only Republicans to the Legislature since the 1930s.

Scott beat Talkington by a 55 percent margin — 4,274 votes to 3,531.

Scott, a 45-year-old housewife who has been active in the GOP party for many years, will replace Rep. Ralph Olmstead, R-Twin Falls. Olmstead lost his bid for the GOP gubernatorial nod in the May primary.

Scott says she won "because I worked long and hard for it, with a lot of people behind me."

"I really was surprised that we led all the way," she said. "All day long, I was preparing for anything — either a win or a loss. I didn't expect to win by that many numbers.

"But then, the race is not always won by the swift, but sometimes by the terrible stength of the weak, the gentleness of the sweet, and sometimes, even the nice," Scott said.

She also agreed with Talkington that her party's backing succeeded in overcoming her lack of name identification. She had said early in the campaign that Talkington's high visibility as mayor would be tough to beat.

But Talkington, was not bitter over the loss. Instead, he said the votes spoke for themselves, and he did not consider it a personal attack.

"We're tough people here, and we'll continue on," he said.

"I think after this election, no one can doubt the effectiveness of the Republican machinery," Talkington continued; "I think is also indicates a (public) satisfaction with the one-party system in our district.

"The party work overcame her lack of name identification," he said. "She won, and I congratulate her."

Scott might be best described as running on a pro-business platform.

She closely identifies with the goals of the Idaho Association of Commerce and Industry. Included in her legislative ambitions are encouragement of trade associations to open Idaho to foreign markets and pursuit of a package of business incentives.

Likewise, Talkington has said his main objective is to see more autonomy granted by the Legislature to local governments — cities, counties and highway districts.

He said this would stimulate individual communities by allowing them to control the type of new business and growth they attract to their area. Talkington also said he would like to see county and city residents be permitted to levy their own local-option taxes.

Both candidates campaigned in support of tougher drunken-driving laws.

Peavey narrowly wins re-election

District 21 incumbents head for victories

HAILEY — Incumbent legislators in Blaine and Minidoka counties walked away with victories Tuesday night.

Sen. John Peavey, D-Carey, apparently defeated his Republican challenger, Eugene Durrell Moon of Heyburn, by a vote of 4,674 to 4,266, with one Lincoln County precinct not counted.

In the other District 21 contested race, Rep. Mack Neibaur, R-Paul, gained a handy 5,127 to 2,940 victory — also with one precinct not counted — over Rupert Democrat Clarence Bellem. Neibaur is vice-chairman of the Legislature's budgeting committee.

Peavey, a four-term incumbent, remains the only Democratic legislator representing residents of the Magic Valley. He believes he will earn a leadership position with the minority party when the Legislature organizes early next month.

"Moon ran an aggressive, solid campaign," Peavey said. "I want to compliment him on his conduct. He is a gentleman."

Peavey believes he used Moon's campaign financing to his own advantage. Moon received strong financial backing from business lobbies, including $3,500 from United for Idaho, a group of utilities and corporations.

"When 95 percent of their (United for Idaho) money comes from utilities and large corporations, it's hard to run a campaign on supporting small business," Peavey said.

But Moon argued that as a miner and small businessman himself, he was able to present a pro-business campaign and garner that support.

Brooks, Trounson lead possible Republican sweep of District 23

Hollifield also holds comfortable lead

TWIN FALLS — Incomplete election returns late Tuesday indicated that Republicans Gordon Hollifield, John Brooks and Wes Trounson were the front-runners in their bids for District 23 legislative seats.

Hollifield of Jerome and Brooks of Gooding each were seeking fifth terms in the House of Representatives.

Trounson, a retired Gooding County assessor, ran against Democrat Floyd Kisling for the state Senate seat held by retiring Kenneth Bradshaw, R-Wendell.

According to the election returns available at midnight Tuesday, Hollifield had captured 2,594 votes, while his opponent, Democrat Bill Hollaman, had received 1,475.

Partial returns indicated John Brooks was leading Dick Strickland, 2,412 to 1,822. Returns from the same precincts showed Wes Trounson with 2,825 votes, and his Democratic opponent, Floyd Kisling, with 1,302.

The figures for all three races represented a full vote count in Camas County, and partial counts in Jerome, Gooding and Lincoln counties. District 23 encompasses all of Camas and Gooding counties, and parts of Jerome and Lincoln counties.

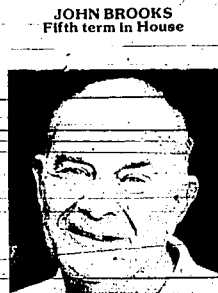

Hollifield, 51, who is a real-estate agent in addition to being a farmer, cited tax reform as his primary goal in the next session of the Legislature.

Brooks, 40, also a farmer, described himself as a conservative with a consistent voting record indicative of his future performance. Their challengers claimed the two incumbents were out of touch with the desires of their constituents.

In his campaign, Trounson supported belt-tightening for all state-funded entities. His ideas about financial strategies for schools and the mission of public education won him the endorsement of the Idaho Education Association.

DENTON DARRINGTON
Will replace Van Engelen

Defeats friend, Bruce Newcomb

Darrington wins District 26 post

BURLEY — Republican Denton Darrington of Declo taught his opponent a lesson in political science Tuesday, apparently winning the District 26 Senate seat left vacant when Sen. Dean Van Engelen unsuccessfully ran for state auditor in the primary.

Darrington, 42, a junior-high school teacher and chairman of the Blaine County Republican Central Committee, led with 4,094 votes to rancher Bruce Newcomb's 3,412, with all but two Jerome County precincts reporting.

Darrington stressed conservative issues in his race, favoring passage of a right-to-work law and advocating repeal of the state's Little Davis-Bacon Act.

He also said electricity users should not have to pay for two defunct nuclear-power projects in Washington state. Cancellation of the projects and cost overruns on three others prompted utility increases this year throughout the Mini-Cassia area.

Ironically, Newcomb serves as a director of Southside Electric Co. of Declo, one of only a few public utility districts in the Northwest that did not sign contracts with the Washington Public Power Supply System to fund the nuclear plants.

Contacted Tuesday night at the Republican campaign headquarters in Burley, Darrington praised his opponent, saying he worked hard without resorting to attacks.

"There were no personalities in this on either side," he said.

Incumbents Vard Chatburn of Albion and Ernest Hale of Oakley, both Republicans, were unopposed in their bids for re-election in the two House seats in District 26.

Voters don't vindicate ex-incumbent

Watts beats Belk for clerk's post

JEROME — Cheryl Watts easily won election to the Jerome County clerk's office Tuesday in a race that Glenda Belk, who recently resigned from the post, hoped would vindicate her of charges of misconduct.

Unofficial results, with 10 out of 14 precincts reporting shortly after midnight, showed Watts leading Belk by nearly a four-to-one margin, 2,206 to 590.

Belk, who beat incumbent Virginia Ricketts in 1978, resigned two weeks ago in a plea-bargain agreement with a special prosecutor, who dismissed five bribery charges, all felonies, against her in exchange for her resignation. The prosecutor had alleged that she accepted $450 worth of gifts from a company doing business with the county. Under the agreement, she was allowed to seek re-election.

Belk pleaded guilty to an unrelated charge of filing a false travel voucher.

But she appealed for vindication at the polls, telling voters that she had made a few mistakes but had done a good job as the county's clerk, auditor and recorder.

Watts had worked for more than nine years as a deputy clerk before resigning in 1980 to become a secretary for the county prosecutor. She had stressed her familiarity with the clerk's office and said more cooperation was needed among departments in the Courthouse.

Contacted Tuesday night, Watts attributed her victory to strong Republican backing and "just a whole lot of people speaking out." She noted that the turnout was heavier than expected.

Slow going

Despite long list of issues, voters are patient

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The voting-booth curtains crashed shut behind the bespectacled, gray-haired woman as she prepared to vote in Tuesday's election.

But barely 15 seconds passed before the curtains were thrust aside and she popped her head out to ask an election judge for help.

"Sometimes, the print is too small for some of the elderly people to read," explained Edith Tinker, an election worker at Twin Falls Precinct 9. "In those cases, there's nothing wrong with a judge (election worker) or spouse going into the booth with the voter to help them read the ballot."

If anything, this problem proved more common Tuesday than in past elections. That's because the numerous initiatives and constitutional amendments on the ballot required that the print be made smaller than usual.

"It also takes a lot of people some time to figure out how the machine works," Tinker said. "Some of the voting has gone rather slow."

That seemed to be the situation throughout the Magic Valley, as many voters took time to read through the descriptions of the three initiatives and eight amendments.

But despite some confusion and long lines of waiting voters, apparently few complaints were made to election clerks.

"We haven't had any complaints about the type size or about having to wait in line," said Twin Falls election clerk Joy Taber. She said that most people seemed to understand the problem this year's long ballot created.

"Everything is going quite smoothly," she said. "But it's hard to estimate how the turnout is."

And while voters pushed their levers, and clerks checked for registration, hardcore political party members were busy trying to drum up last-minute support.

"All day long, we're calling everybody we can to remind them to get out and vote," said Bonnie Smazal, the manager of the Twin Falls Democratic headquarters.

"Of course, we only call known Democrats," she said, laughing. "You don't want to help the opposition if you can help it."

The Republicans took the same attitude.

"We have poll watchers who keep track of which of our people are voting. That way, we know who to call and who not to," said Terry Mann, of the GOP headquarters in Twin Falls.

But the two parties were not prejudiced totally according to party affiliations. Both sponsored several automobiles that were available throughout Tuesday to provide transportation to the polls.

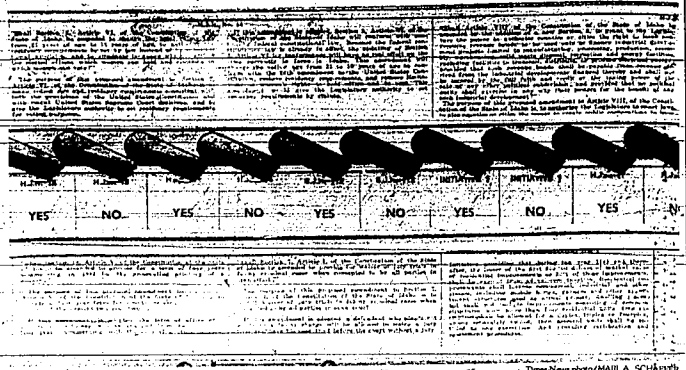

"Mostly, we serve elderly people who can't walk very far to vote and who no longer drive," Mann said.

"However, we require no party affiliation. We're happy to help anyone be able to vote — Democrat or Republican."

The addictive, Election-Day mood also caught on with election clerks and judges. Many of them said their role in governing the voting process provides numerous rewards, including a sense of patriotism and helpfulness.

"It's a service. I like helping people vote," said Tinker, who started as a clerk 25 years ago.

"I like helping people work the machine, or read the ballot," Tinker said. "Of course, many folks have no problem at all. Some memorize who they want to vote for, while others bring in little lists to remind themselves, especially on some of these complex amendments."

Twin Falls will switch to sodium streetlights

By SUSAN GALLAGHER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A plan to refit city streetlights, in anticipation of an eventual financial savings, won the approval Monday night of Twin Falls City Council.

Twin Falls will join several other cities in an agreement through which the Idaho Power Co. will convert its street-lighting systems to improve energy efficiency, council members decided.

The conversion program involves switching from incandescent and mercury-vapor lights to high-pressure sodium lighting.

Twin Falls, Boise and several other Idaho communities will give Idaho Power money to help fund equipment and labor for the conversions around the state. By paying for equipment and labor, the cities will achieve a more substantial rate reduction from Idaho Power when the street-lighting conversion is achieved, according to Tom Courtney, the Twin Falls city manager.

The plan, as outlined before City Council this week, was proposed by a group of Idaho cities and was approved by the PUC about a year ago, Courtney said.

Under the cities' proposal, the cost of conversion would be paid within five years, preventing the conversion costs from being included in Idaho Power's rate base.

Courtney said that under the program, Twin Falls' capital cost would be about $218,824, while Boise would pay $468,590, Pocatello would pay $411,676, Mountain Home, $82,432, and Nampa, $226,730.

Twin Falls' monthly street-lighting bill of $7,356 would drop to the $4,000 to $5,000 range under the subsidized conversion program, Courtney said.

Ranger district office will relocate

TWIN FALLS — The U.S. Forest Service's Twin Falls Ranger District will move later this month from its offices off Blue Lakes Boulevard North to an office complex off Kimberly Road.

The new location, at 2647 E. Kimberly Road, already houses a Sawtooth National Forest warehouse, radio shop and fire-dispatch center.

Jerry Davis, the Twin Falls district ranger, said the move will save the Forest Service $14,000 a year in rent. He also said that the new location will be easier to find since it is on the major travel route from Twin Falls to the South Hills.

The move is expected to be completed by Dec. 1.

Correction

TWIN FALLS — A magic show tonight in the College of Southern Idaho Fine Arts Building auditorium will be held at 6 p.m., instead of 8 p.m., as was reported earlier in The Times-News.

The show is sponsored by the Twin Falls Exchange Club as a fund-raiser.

County races

Butler leads Grindstaff in tight race

CARL MONTGOMERY

CARLYLE BUTLER
Holds slim lead

JEROME — A close race Tuesday night for the First District county commission seat in Jerome County showed Republican challenger Carlyle Butler leading incumbent Mel Grindstaff.

With returns in from 10 of the 14 precincts, Butler was ahead of Grindstaff, a Democrat and the present chairman of the county commission, by 1,446 to 1,294.

In the Third District commission race, incumbent Henry Schutte was taking a sound beating from a fellow Eden-area farmer, Carl Montgomery. Schutte, who lost to Montgomery in the primary, was running as a write-in candidate. He polled 363 votes to 1,960 for Montgomery. Both are Republicans.

Other contests included the race for the treasurer's post, where incumbent Elsie Childers, a Republican, was leading Ella Mink, the Democratic challenger, by a margin of 1,985 to 856.

Marjorie H. DuBois, a Republican, led Ed Messenger, a Democrat, in the assessor's race by a 1,766-to-996 margin.

Grindstaff said just before midnight that with several precincts yet to report, he would not concede.

"He's running ahead and has been all evening, but returns are slow, and I am still waiting for final returns," he said.

"I'm happy with the way it looks at this time," Butler said. "The percentages have held up pretty well through the night, but I'm not saying I've won yet."

Grindstaff, 69, has served on the commission six years and was seeking his third term. He is a retired service-station and garage owner.

Butler, 62, is a semi-retired real-estate broker and a former businessman and farmer. He campaigned on a platform of better county management. Grindstaff stood on his record of what he said was fair service to all county residents.

Schutte also had served as a commissioner for six years. He operates a farm and potato-warehouse business. Montgomery farms in the Eden area and was making his first bid for public office.

If Butler succeeds in defeating Grindstaff, the Jerome County commission will be a solidly Republican board.

All eyes at party headquarters glued to TVs as returns pour in

By PAT MARGANTONIO
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Republican headquarters was filled with smoke, laughter and the feeling of victory as the election results rolled in Tuesday evening.

Meanwhile, across town at the Turf Club, county Democrats were a little fewer and a little quieter.

The Democratic affair was slow getting starting Tuesday, while Republicans arrived in boisterous groups.

There were common sights at both gatherings — like television sets carrying the local, state and national voting results. The atmosphere changed with each win or loss reported by the networks for the respective political parties.

Soon after the polls closed, Judy Felton, the Republican candidate for Twin Falls County commission, sat quiet and apprehensive. Later in the evening, as the tallies showed her leading her Democratic opponent, Alvie Johnson, Felton began to cheer up, ending the evening wearing a bright smile.

Despite the less than positive gains for his campaign, Johnson also grinned and said that he was feeling "just fine."

At each Republican victory announced over the big-screen television, those gathered at the county GOP headquarters applauded loudly. It was definitely a cause to celebrate.

"All we've done for the past eight weeks is work our fingers to the nub," said Terry Mann, the Twin Falls County Republican coordinator. "It's time to sit back and keep our fingers crossed."

The GOP headquarters featured balloons, beer and quiche. Cookies and cheeses, bread and chips were spread on a tablecloth of red, white and blue.

Republican volunteer Carletta Cox said Tuesday's gathering was more "personal" than the poll-watching party of two years ago, when Ronald Reagan and his fellow Republicans swept the country. She had become more "involved in the local races."

At the Turf Club, Democrat Laura Miller admitted the crowd's mood was "grim," but she added that it was a lot better than when the 1980 election results were announced.

"We do have cause to celebrate, based on the national returns," Miller said. Besides, she added, it was still early in the evening and many voting results were unavailable.

Oooh's, ahhh's and expletives were heard at the Democratic headquarters after television anchormen reported local and state losses.

"I thought we were going to win," said Virginia Ash of Buhl. Ash, who admitted the atmosphere at party headquarters was less than party-like, said as the returns began pouring in that, "I don't see anybody dancing."

But optimism is eternal in politics. A fellow Democrat sitting across from her smiled at her remark and promised, "We will be soon."

Felton wins commissioners' race

JUDY FELTON
New Twin Falls commissioner

TWIN FALLS — Republicans maintained their solid hold on Twin Falls County offices, with Judy Felton of Buhl defeating the one Democrat candidate for county office.

Felton, 40, the former Buhl Planning and Zoning Commission chairman, racked up a substantial winning total over Alvie Johnson, 58, a Buhl farmer-rancher, 9,105 to 5,510, with all 48 precincts reporting. The two candidates were competing for the District 1 county commission seat being vacated by retiring Commissioner Merl Leonard of Filer.

Johnson was the only Democrat seeking a county office in Twin Falls County. Six other incumbents, all Republicans, ran unopposed.

The Felton-Johnson race remained friendly throughout the campaign and was the only contest in Twin Falls County. Six other incumbents, all Republicans, ran unopposed.

Felton emphasized her experience in Buhl city affairs and her involvement as a part-time instructor at the College of Southern Idaho, and she promised an innovative approach to county government.

She attributes her win to intense campaigning.

"In the last month I realized I had to work harder and do a lot of door-to-door campaigning, especially in the eastern part of the county."

Felton also says that she believes a county commissioner "has got to let the people know that they will listen to them."

Other county returns showed all the following incumbents winning in uncontested races: District 3 Commissioner Ann Cover, Clerk Dick Pence, Prosecutor Harry DeHaan, Assessor Dorthy Hamby, Treasurer Juanita Stettler and Coroner Cloyce Edwards.

Incumbent clerk falls in Minidoka

RUPERT — A 20-year incumbent clerk, auditor and recorder was defeated Tuesday in a controversial race in Minidoka County.

The three current Republican commissioners had endorsed the Republican challenger to Clerk August Bethke, a Democrat. They said it was time for a change in clerk's office. They accused him of creating "dissension" among county offices.

Bethke called the charges "political rhetoric and garbage," but he was defeated by a wide margin by Duane Smith. Smith received 3,645 votes to Bethke's 2,637.

The commissioners also found themselves involved in controversy when they awarded a contract to the county's outgoing assessor, even though his was the higher of two bids. The former assessor, Republican Cecil Dickson, turned down the contract because of the controversy.

But Commissioner Fred Maier, the only commissioner seeking re-election, apparently was not hurt by the controversies.

Maier, a Republican, defeated Democrat Hal Stevenson in the race for the District 3 seat by 142 votes. Maier received 3,134 votes to 2,992 for Stevenson.

In the race for the District 1 county commission seat, Republican Norman Selbold won by almost 700 votes. He received 3,436 votes, to beat Democrat George Grant, who received 2,767 votes.

Democrat Greg Saylor won the race for assessor by a wide margin. Saylor, who worked as an appraiser in the office for seven years, received 3,983 votes, to beat Republican W. Monte Robinson, who received 2,266 votes.

Prosecutor John Bradley, a Republican, swamped Democratic challenger Stan Cole. Bradley received 4,192 votes; Cole received 2,903.

Two other incumbents, both Republicans, were unopposed in Minidoka County. In Cassia County races, the seven incumbent Republicans all were unopposed.

Gooding

GOODING — Voters in Gooding County apparently were bent on returning incumbents to office in the clerk's and coroner's races, and they elected a new prosecutor.

With half of the county's precincts in shortly before midnight, the results were:

Republican John Arkoosh led Democrat Michael Douglas in the prosecutor's race, with 817 votes to 365 for Douglas.

Democrat Margaret F. Clements, the incumbent clerk, auditor and recorder, was narrowly leading Republican challenger Joyce Scanlon, with 652 votes to Scanlon's 585.

Republican Dr. James Molchan, the incumbent coroner, led Democrat Gary Loder by more than 300 votes. The late-evening tally was: Molchan, 822; Loder, 391.

Robert P. Thackeray of Wendell, a Republican running for the Third District county commission seat being vacated by Rick Brailsford, was overwhelming a last-minute write-in campaign by Everett Cox, a Wendell-area resident.

Will Thomas ran unopposed for the First District commission seat.

Doris O. Robertson of Gooding, a Republican, ran unopposed as treasurer, a position she has held since 1965.

Lincoln

SHOSHONE — Lincoln County voters apparently were looking to Republicans on Tuesday to fill the contested seats of commissioner and assessor.

The Times-News went to press with half of the six precincts in the county reporting. The results were:

Republican Douglas Hansen led Democrat Kathleen Ugalde by a margin of 123 votes for the District 3 commission seat.

The tally was: Hansen 279, Ugalde 156.

Hansen was running on his business knowlege, which he said would be useful in the budgeting and spending of county funds.

In the assessor race, Republican Imogene Heisley, the incumbent, led Democrat Lynn Williams by 195 votes, with 439 tallied.

Heisley ran on her achievements as assessor, including her successful effort against the state's move to force an increase in the market values of Lincoln County properties.

Incumbent Lincoln County officials who were unopposed in their bids for re-election were: Commissioner Burrel Williams, Clerk Linda Stevenson, Treasurer Harriett Davidson, Prosecutor Douglas Rose and Coroner R.G. Neher.

Camas

FAIRFIELD — A crowded ballot drew a high number of voters in Camas County, with an estimated 90 percent of the registered voters showing up at the polls Tuesday, according to county Clerk George Gill.

In the race for county clerk, Republican Rollie Bennett beat Democrat Mike Danielson, 191 to 181. A third candidate, Sue Robbins, who had lost the Republican nomination for clerk in the May primary, received 121 write-in votes. Gill, the incumbent Republican, is retiring.

Republican Derral Hupfer won the race for assessor, receiving 332 votes, compared to 165 for Democrat Bill McGinnis. The current assessor, Ed Ward, a Democrat, is retiring.

Republican Wilma Colter retained her job as treasurer. She received 357 votes, while her Democratic challenger Patricia Lee received 144.

Republican Ray Wolfe was unopposed in his bid for the District 3 county commission seat and received 376 votes. The incumbent Pat Funkhouser, a Democrat, dropped out of the race two weeks ago.

Republican Allen Bauscher was unopposed for the District 1 county commission seat and received 374 votes. Republican John Varin was unopposed for prosecutor and received 395 votes.

Wetherell, Larson grab District 22 seats

MOUNTAIN HOME — In her third bid for state office, Democrat Claire Wetherell held a large lead in the race for the District 22 Senate seat.

With 19 of 21 precincts reporting at midnight, Wetherell of Mountain Home had 2,653 votes, compared to 2,035 for her Republican opponent, Vernon Gillespie, also of Mountain Home.

Wetherell, the president of the Mountain Home City Council, previously had run twice against Sen. Wilson Steen, a Republican, who retired this year. Gillespie had served as a stand-in for Steen in the last legislative session.

In the race for the A-position House seat for District 22, Democrat Mark Larson, a Mountain Home school teacher and political cartoonist, held a comfortable lead over incumbent Hooser of Buhl, received 2,234 votes. District 24 covers western and southern Twin Falls County.

Neither candidate campaigned actively.

The 62-year-old Brackett is a life-long Magic Valley resident and staunch conservative. He said he is proud of his accomplishments in the Legislature.

"Frankly, I've worked hard at it," he said.

In two other District 24 races, incumbents John Barker and Lawrence Kniggo, both Republicans, were unopposed.

Noy Brackett wins 5th term to Legislature

TWIN FALLS — Noy Brackett was easily re-elected Tuesday to his fifth term in the Legislature, beating his Democratic opponent by better than a two-to-one margin.

The Republican cattle rancher from District 24 had 5,571 votes, while his opponent, 56-year-old Diana Van Arthur Isaac, a Republican, who had been appointed to the Legislature in January 1981.

With 19 out of 21 precincts reporting, Larson was leading Isaac by a margin of 2,457 to 2,028.

It was the first election for Isaac, a Mountain Home merchant. Larson, who moved to Idaho five years ago, previously had served on a city council in Bertha, Minn.

Partial returns indicate airport authority will disband

JEROME — With partial returns in late Tuesday night from four of the five counties that voted on the future of the Southern Idaho Regional Airport Authority, it appeared that the authority was headed for dissolution by a vote of 4,729 to 2,198.

In Cassia County, with 23 of 26 precincts reporting, the vote was 3,137 to disband and 1,236 to retain; Minidoka County, with three of 13 precincts in, voted 734 for dissolution and 302 against; Jerome County, with six of 14 precincts reporting, 838 voters were for disbanding and 527 were against; and in Lincoln County, two out of six precincts showed 203 voters supported disbanding and 133 were against.

Gooding County officials said no returns would be available until today.

The 10-year-old authority was formed to build a regional airport in Jerome County. Board members decided to ask for a vote on dissolving the authority in September after the Federal Aviation Agency dropped the project from the national airport plan.

Gardner captures Blaine position

HAILEY — Democrat Robert Gardner of Gannett squeaked out a victory Tuesday in a county commission race with fellow Blaine County rancher A.W. "Bill" Molyneux.

Gardner, a member of the Blaine County Planning and Zoning Commission and the son of a former county commissioner, led 1,772 to 1,734, in an unofficial tally reported by the Blaine County clerk's office shortly before midnight.

Molyneux, a Picabo rancher, had said he could support his opponent as well. He had pledged to continue the record of service set by Commissioner Ray Sweat, who did not seek re-election.

All other candidates in the county were unopposed.

Incumbents win rec district vote

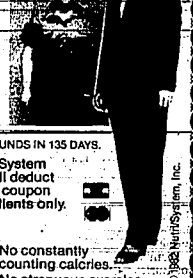

JEROME — Both incumbent members of the Jerome Recreation District board of directors were returned to office in a special election Tuesday.

Board Chairman Danny Forsyth defeated challenger Ted Burton, 524 to 203, in subdistrict 1, and Vic Jaro defeated Barbara May, 499 to 232, in subdistrict 2.

Idaho Power seeks to alter payments to cogenerators

By RON ZELLAR
Times-News writer

BOISE — The Idaho Power Co. has asked the state Public Utilities Commission to change the formula that determines how much money it must pay to cogenerators and small power producers.

The only two private hydroelectric plants operating in the Idaho Power system are located near Buhl and Shoshone. Dozens of other small hydro projects are planned on the many streams and drainage ditches that flow into the Snake River.

Under the Idaho Power proposal, greater emphasis would be placed on the amount of electricity produced by a private generating station, rather than on its size.

Idaho Power also has asked that the highest rate it pays for electricity from plants starting operation in 1983 be reduced from 7.2 cents a kilowatt-hour to 5.6 cents a kwh, and that its highest rates be subject to change with approval from the PUC.

The existing formula establishes rates based on a plant's expected reliability, and on Idaho Power's "avoided cost" — the price per kilowatt-hour the company pays to construct its own, large generating stations.

In documents filed last week, Idaho Power officials said the formula does not account for the reduced need for new generating plants brought on by conservation, nor does it reflect the increased availability of surplus power in the region.

Cogenerators expecting to receive the full avoided-cost rate would have to agree to allow the PUC to change the rate at any time in the future, under the proposal.

Those wishing to be paid a fixed rate would receive somewhat less than the full avoided cost in return for the added security.

In the past, the PUC has criticized Idaho Power's unwillingness to buy power from the new small plants, saying development of hydroelectric power from small streams is in the customers' long-term interests.

However, a spokesman for the commission, Dana Howard, said Monday that the three commissioners are willing to review the formula. A conference is scheduled for Thursday to establish public hearings on the issue.

Wallace Cory, a Boise engineer and vice president of Independent Power Producers, said high interest rates have been the primary obstacle to the development of small hydro sites.

However, if the price Idaho Power pays producers is lowered substantially, Cory said it could affect the amount of energy available from small plants.

He said the members of the consortium of small-plant owners would review the Idaho Power proposal carefully and testify at the hearings.

Players: We've made major compromises

NEW YORK (UPI) — Striking NFL players Tuesday said they have made major compromises in their last counter-proposal and have asked the owners to do the same in hopes of settling the 43-day football walkout.

With the latest developments, the two sides appear decidedly closer to reaching an agreement than when talks broke off Monday night.

A source close to the negotiations revealed there was no mention of a wage scale or percentage of television revenues in the counter-proposal by the players early Monday. The union also is willing to settle for a five-year deal instead of an originally proposed three-year arrangement.

It was also learned that management is willing to allow collective bargaining for performance and incentive bonuses and may agree to severance pay, which now is nonexistent in the NFL.

The sides are still apart on how much the total salary package will be worth and what percentage will be bargained collectively.

Negotiations between the NFL Players Association and the NFL Management Council are to resume at a midtown hotel today at 6 a.m. MST. The two sides and mediator Sam Kagel will meet for 90 minutes before the parties caucus. At 11 a.m. both sides are to hold joint talks.

Player representatives were to meet at 9 p.m. Tuesday.

The sides were guardedly optimistic about Tuesday's session.

"It appears both parties are beginning to come together on many of the major economic issues," said union spokesman Dave Sheridan.

Jim Miller, the director of information of the league's bargaining arm, said: "Some of this should have been done months ago so that the only issues were economic ones, not an attempt to change a system that has been good to both parties for 63 years.

"We have heard terms from the union such as 'caving in' — things like that. But until it is on the table, I will not even express any optimism about a quick settlement."

New England Patriots player representative Don Hasselback threatened Monday night that the NFLPA might go back to the wage scale if management doesn't make concessions soon.

"This nice guy approach maybe has to come to an end," Hasselback said. "A lot of the players back home are upset, they said 'You're trying to get a settlement, but you're giving things away. What's going on there?'"

On Sunday, the owners offered the union a $1.28 billion package over four years beginning in 1983. The players countered with a $1.1 billion 3-year package with 80 percent of the money controlled by the NFLPA. The parties are attempting to end the first in-season work stoppage in the league's history.

While the union dropped its demand for a precentage of television revenues, it asked for a clause in which management would reopen the issue in the case of a renegotiated television package.

Under the proposed severance pay plan, a 10-year veteran with a base salary of $180,000 would receive a full year's pay if he is cut or retires.

The NFL has called off six weekends of play and this weekend's games may be lost as well. Ed Garvey, executive director of the NFLPA, said the owners are now planning for an 11-game schedule instead of 12 games.

"From what I hear, the competition committee thinks an 11-game schedule is better than a 12-game schedule," he said. "But we still have to bargain for a complete season and try to resolve that this week."

A union source said Commissioner Pete Rozelle is considering pushing back the Jan. 30 Super Bowl.

"Mr. Rozelle discussed the pros and cons of different dates, including March 7," the source said.

Earlier in the day, Commissioner Pete Rozelle held three separate meetings at his New York office with 10 player reps, Management Council's six-member executive committee and Kagel.

Sheridan said Rozelle, who has refused to enter the negotiations, told the players: "If you have trouble with our proposal, let me try to help clean up the language."

The group of players included Rich Milot of Washigton, Dan Diggetts of Chicago, Hasselbeck of New England and union advisor Dave Meggysey. Another player group, which included Brian Baschnagel of Chicago, was unable to meet with Rozelle.

Garvey said he thought a number of owners were headed to New York to attend the talks. However, Miller said no owners would take part in the talks.

In another matter, Dick Berthelsen, assistant executive director for the union, and at least 10 of the 28 player reps present went to the National Labor Relations Board headquarters in New York to argue that the Management Council still is not bargaining in good faith.

Astros promote Lillis, give him mandate

HOUSTON (UPI) — The Houston Astros promoted one of their own Tuesday, naming former player and coach Bob Lillis to the manager's job with a one-year mandate to guide the team out of the second division.

Lillis — a quiet, unassuming student and teacher of the summer game — said he was gratified his 20 years with the organization paid off in his promotion.

"I feel deeply honored they have shown this much confidence in me," he said.

The manager's job was Lillis' first at any level. He took it at an estimated salary of $80,000 — making up his mind he wanted it only after guiding the Astros as interim manager late last season to a 28-23 record.

Lillis was owner John McMullen's choice to replace the fired Bill Virdon, who since has become the Montreal Expos' manager.

"Bob Lillis is the right man at this time to be appointed as the manager of the Houston Astros for the 1983 season," McMullen said in a statement given to reporters. "This conviction is based not only on Bob Lillis' baseball talent, but even more importantly, on his character, integrity and loyalty to the organization."

> 'I don't feel threatened. I feel if I do a good job I'll be back the next year and if I don't, there'll be a change.'
> —Bob Lillis

Lillis, nicknamed the "Flea" by Frank Howard because of his quickness and 5-11, 160-pound size while playing shortstop for Los Angeles, St. Louis and the Astros, is best known in baseball circles as a fine defensive player.

"He got the most that he could from his ability as a player," said Larry Dierker, a former teammate and current Astros broadcaster.

In his rise through the Astros ranks after he quit the field in 1967, Lillis, 52, instructed in the minor leagues, scouted and coached without any real drive to ascend to the manager's job. He did not seek it until after managing for 51 games in August and September and after being convinced by others he could do it.

"I had reservations about it," he said. "But the players responded to me and that encouraged me. I also got encouragement from people in the organization and learned that I enjoyed my relationship with the media."

Lillis said he had "thought a lot" about being the man responsible to the fans and media.

McMullen had talked to San Francisco Giants second baseman Joe Morgan about the job, but General Manager Al Rosen said he always felt Lillis was the choice.

"This man stepped into the breech and took over a ballclub that needed help," he said.

The Astros slipped to fifth place last season, 12 games behind the Atlanta Braves, after Virdon had led them to the West Division title in 1980 and to a second-half championship in 1981.

Lillis said his one-year contract did not worry him.

"I don't feel threatened. I feel if I do a good job I'll be back the next year and if I don't, there'll be a change," he said.

Lillis is the eighth manager in Astros history.

McNamara replaces Mauch at California

ANAHEIM, Calif. (UPI) — John McNamara, who won more games than any other National League manager in the three years before he was fired by the Cincinnati Reds midway through last season, was named Tuesday to lead the California Angels.

McNamara, 50, replaces Gene Mauch, who resigned Oct. 22 after leading the Angels to the American League West title for his first championship in more than 20 years of managing.

"I'm thrilled to say the least," said McNamara from his home in Cincinnati. "I'm very pleased and very happy to have the opportunity to manage the Angels."

McNamara said he had been signed to a one-year contract by Angel Vice President Buzzie Bavasi, who hired him in 1974 at San Diego, where he managed until 1977.

The Sacramento, Calif., native broke into organized baseball as a catcher in 1951 and managed in the minors until taking over from Hank Bauer as manager of the Oakland A's on Sept. 19, 1969. He managed the A's to second place in the AL West in 1970.

The low-key McNamara is used to having plenty of talent and letting his players play. The knock against Mauch was that he overmanaged his high-priced lineup of stars, which included four former American League MVPs. That criticism intensified after the Angels, leading the Milwaukee Brewers, 2-0, in the AL Championship Series, lost the next three games and a chance to advance to their first World Series ever.

JOHN McNAMARA
Moves from N.L.

McNamara took over the Reds at the beginning of the 1979 season after Sparky Anderson was fired. He had been a coach for the Angels the previous season.

McNamara led Cincinnati to the NL West title that year with a 90-71 record. The Reds were second-in-1980 with an 89-73 mark and wound up second in both halves of the split season in 1981, compiling the best overall record in the majors but missing the playoffs.

He was replaced on July 21 of this year by Russ Nixon when the Reds, who lost their starting outfield to free agency during the off-season, had slipped to last place in the NL West with a 34-58. Cincinnati wound up with the worst record in the NL at 61-101, second only to the AL Minnesota Twins, who lost 102 games.

At Cincinnati, McNamara compiled a 245-186 record in his three full seasons, a winning percentage of .568 and the best three-year mark in the NL. His major league mark as a manager is 600-632.

"It's premature to think about any changes (on the Angels)," McNamara said by telephone from his home in Cincinnati. "We're just going to do the best we can and go from there."

McNamara said he was walking into a situation similar to the one he had at Cincinnati, replacing a successful and popular manager, and inheriting a powerful team.

"The situation would be comparable," McNamara said. "That was not exactly a walk in the park as popular and successful as he was."

Pitt takes No. 1

NEW YORK (UPI) — Pittsburgh is back on top and with a flourish.

Following a 63-14 romp over Louisville and Washington's loss to Stanford, the Panthers were returned to the top of the college football ratings Tuesday in voting by the UPI board of coaches.

Pittsburgh held the top spot for the first three weeks of the season before giving way to Washington. The unbeaten Panthers lost the top spot because of a sputtering offense which produced several unimpressive victories.

Washington was defeated 43-31 by Stanford's explosive attack led by John Elway.

Pittsburgh received 33 first-place votes and a total of 612 points to second-place Georgia's one first-place vote and 563 points.

Rounding out the top 10, in order, were Southern Methodist, Arkansas, Nebraska, Penn State, Alabama, UCLA, Washington and Louisiana State.

The second 10 were composed of Florida State, Oklahoma, North Carolina, Clemson, Michigan, West Virginia, Maryland, Florida, Texas and Notre Dame.

Pittsburgh coach "Foge" Fazio said he's more concerned with his players' health than being No. 1. On Saturday, the Panthers host Notre Dame.

"I would rather have all my players back to practice rather than be No. 1," said Fazio. "(Tight end) John Brown, (defensive end) Mike Woods and (running back) Bryan Thomas are ailing a bit and so is (guard) Rob Fada.

"If we're at full strength, I'll play anybody in America but we had a depth problem this year and our depth is playing right now."

The United Press International Board of Coaches Top 20 college football ratings, with first-place votes in parentheses (total points based on 15 points for first place, 14 for second, etc.).

1. Pittsburgh (33)	7-0	612
2. Georgia (1)	8-0	563

Senseless firing of Kuhn may cause owners some grief

By KEVIN COWHERD
The Baltimore Evening Sun

CHICAGO — They stuck it to Bowie Kuhn Tuesday.

Fourteen years after he took office, a bloodless coup orchestrated by eight major league owners succeeded in toppling the commissioner of baseball. Now let us see if baseball's owners do not bleed a little because of their senseless decision.

Under Kuhn, an admittedly colorless leader who, nevertheless, guarded the welfare and integrity of the game with a passion, baseball prospered as never before. Apparently, his efforts were not good enough.

Big, clumsy Bowie Kuhn stepped on a few too many toes in his tenure as baseball's overseer. Tuesday, the Chicago Eight paid him back.

Nothing personal, you understand.

George Steinbrenner of the Yankees, George Argyros of the Mariners and Eddie Chiles of the Rangers were the deep-thinkers who turned thumbs down on Kuhn from the American League. Nelson Doubleday of the Mets, John McMullen of the Astros, William Williams of the Reds, Gussie Busch of the Cardinals and Ted Turner of the Braves were the five National League hitmen.

"It took me seven years," said Turner, the compassionate, far-sighted Atlanta owner, after casting his vote, "but I finally got him."

Nothing personal, Bowie. You understand.

From the very beginning of his reign, it was easy for the owners to line up Kuhn in their gunsights. How in the world did he last 14 years? The owners never wanted a strong-willed man as commissioner, and whenever Kuhn flexed a muscle, the owners stirred uneasily.

They asked Kuhn to be a wimp and he refused. He was honest and even-handed and impartial. The owners knew they had created a monster from the beginning. The owners paid Kuhn his salary, told him to look after the game. For 14 years he did just that, and then they stuck it to him in that toddlin' town.

Where the integrity of the game was concerned, Kuhn was not content to just step on toes. Often, he donned steel-toed boots and stomped on the feet of owners and players alike.

He voided Charlie Finley's attempted sale of Vida Blue to the Yankees and Rollie Fingers and Joe Rudi to the Red Sox, when the schizophrenic Oakland A's owner tried to deplete his team in a fit of pique over cash-flow problems.

He nailed Steinbrenner, that paragon of virtue, with a year's suspension for illegal campaign contributions to one Richard Nixon. He fined and suspended Turner, another saint, for tampering with free agent Gary Matthews. He lifted $100,000 from the wallet of Ray Kroc, the hamburger baron of San Diego, for hinting his interest in players already under contract.

He took on Willie Mays and Henry Aaron, and the baseball world gasped.

Mays wanted an instructor's job with the Mets, but he refused to divest himself of his interest in an Atlantic City casino, where he served in a public relations capacity. Kuhn clucked his tongue, fearful of baseball being linked with a gambling syndicate. Mays stayed on the boardwalk and out of the batting cage.

The Aaron case was potentially more explosive. With the Atlanta slugger nearing the all-time home run record, the Braves tried to keep him out of the lineup during several road games so the record would be broken at home. Sorry, said Kuhn. Without Aaron, the Braves would not be putting forth their best effort to win.

Yet personal vendettas aside, two other factors also set up Kuhn for the Chicago overthrow: his seeming lack of leadership during the 1981 players strike, and his backing of a revenue-sharing plan that could ultimately help baseball profit even further.

The strike lasted seven weeks, and for seven weeks Kuhn tended the garden of his New Jersey home and uttered not a peep. The press railed against him for his low profile; the owners smiled knowingly. Months earlier, the owners had told Kuhn to stay out of the negotiations, effectively tying his hands with clauses in his contract that made it all but impossible for him to intervene.

Yet when the strike dragged on, a few owners decided the lack of authority emanating from the commissioner necessitated a restructuring of the office. Steinbrenner was one of those owners. For Kuhn, it was the beginning of the end.

The revenue-sharing plan proposed by Kuhn not too long ago provided some owners with the final bullet they needed to trigger his demise. Casting an eye on the lucrative television monies to be gained from the ever-burgeoning string of cable networks, Kuhn felt the fiscal pie should be divided up equally.

The struggling owners cheered. The wealthier owners — read Steinbrenner, Turner, et al — recoiled in horror. Kuhn, the wealthy owners cried, lacked the ability to deal with the increasingly complex business issue confronting baseball.

The decision was final: Kuhn must go. So Tuesday they bid farewell to Kuhn and he left in style.

After the vote, with ample reason to taken a few shots at some of the owners, Kuhn only would say, "I don't believe in bitterness. But if I told you I was happy, I'd be lying. I do take some pride in the fact that after 14 years in office, I still gained 70 percent of the votes. That is a landslide everywhere but here."

It was a great day for the wimps of the world.

USU to hold pre-game party

TWIN FALLS — Perons interested in attending both the Utah State-Boise-State football game Nov. 13 at Bronco Stadium and a Utah State pre-game function should call 733-6581 for tickets.

Garvey files for free agency

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Steve Garvey, the Los Angeles Dodgers' star first baseman, Tuesday filed for free agency with the Major League Players Association, according to his agent, Jerry Kapstein.

"I thought it was necessary to file today because the next regularly scheduled meeting we have with the Dodgers is not until Thursday and that would put us right up against the filing deadline," Kapstein said.

Kapstein said he talked with Dodger representatives last night and said that he had "an amicable and friendly discussion" with them. He did not rule out the possibility that he would meet again with Los Angeles club officials shortly.

Garvey, who will be 34 next month and has been a Dodger for all 12 of his major league seasons, said that he would like to play another five years and would prefer to end his career with he Dodgers. He is said to be seeking a five-year contract worth $1.5 million a year and the Dodgers are said to be offering a three-year contract in the neighborhood of $750,000 a year.

Dodgers vice president Al Campanis said the team would continue to negotiate with Garvey in hopes of reaching an agreement.

Rose will return to Phillies

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Pete Rose, who hit just .271 last season, will return to the Philadelphia Phillies next year, team President Bill Giles announced Tuesday.

Giles said the Phillies would renew the 41-year-old Rose's contract for another year but said Rose should slow down.

"I say he should play 155 (of 162) games," Giles said at a news conference. "I think in the hot summer months he should not play double-headers, but it's up to his manager (Pat Corrales) and Pete."

Rose, who has a contract that runs through the 1986 season but must be renewed each year by the Phillies before Nov. 15, maintained his desire to play.

"If I'm going to be here every night I just don't want to sit and watch — but if I come to the ballpark and my name is not in the lineup I'm not going to go running to Pat," Rose said.

Rose said he felt he had an "obligation" to play often.

"If I was hitting .310 you wouldn't have said anything about me taking days off, but I wouldn't have hit any higher if I'd taken days off in July. When you're a lifetime .310 hitter and hit .270, naturally people are going to say you can't hit anymore."

According to Giles the decision to keep Rose was carefully considered.

West spikers take East in 4

TWIN FALLS — The benefit of an extra week's play and state experience paid off Tuesday night when the West All-Stars thumped the East in the annual Magic Valley Girls All-Star Volleyball Match.

The West team, coached by Jolene Toone of Gooding and Kathy Anderson of Twin Falls, trimmed the east 15-3, 15-12, 14-16, 15-9 in front of about 800 spectators.

"I think we had a distinct advantage because all but two of the girls on our team played for schools that went to state," said Toone. "The East didn't have any. That makes a difference from a confidence standpoint, too."

When the final points on the player evaluation sheet were added up, they showed that Diane Yore of Gooding and Kari Easton had superior games. Yore accounted for 15 serving points while Easton had a good night spiking. Toone also cited the setting of Anice Morrow of Wood River as a major help in the victory.

Terri Matthews of Burley came up with some solid spiking to pace the east.

For the most part, however, the statistics showed the girls on both teams pretty well matched.

"Everyone contributed," said Toone. "There was some great play by both sides."

Mt. Home paces SCIC football team

BUHL — Mountain Home placed 11 players on the first team and had the offensive and defensive players of the year in addition to the coach of the year when the All-South Central Idaho Conference Football Team was selected Tuesday.

The league's all-conference volleyball and cross country teams were selected as well.

Running back Dave Toy was named the offensive player of the team while teammate Andrew Bailey was chosen the defensive player of 1982. Mountain Home Coach Rick Pease won the top coaching honors.

Jerome High landed seven player on the all-conference squad while Wood River and Buhl each placed four and Burley had three.

Wood River and Burley each placed four girls on the 12-member volleyball squad.

Jerome dominated the boys cross country choices with five runners earning all-league laurels. Wood River placed four girls on the cross country team.

The selections as made by the respective coaches:

Bruins, Stands earn honors

TWIN FALLS — Three Twin Falls High players have been named to the 1982 All-Gem State Conference Volleyball team and Coach Duane Stands took cross country honors.

Senior Toni Martinez earned first-team honors while junior Jill Skeem and senior Wendy Coants were named to the second team.

Idaho Falls High Coach Mary Farmer was named coach of the year and Tina Fielding of Idaho Falls was named the player of the year.

Other first-team selections were Skyline's Mickey Hill, Blackfoot's Renee Rose and Susan Nate and Idaho Falls' Kelly Bailey and Fielding. Bailey was the only non-senior named to the first team.

The other second-team choices of the coaches included Jan Gallop of Idaho Falls, Pam Ellis of Bonneville, Tonya Carpenter of Highland and Chris Romasko of Pocatello.

Stands, who saw his Twin Falls girls come out of no where to win the conference title and then miss by an eyelash of taking the state title, was named the girls cross country coach of the year. Bob Conley, who led Highland to conference and state honors, was the boys' coach.

Greg Kelly of Highland and Craol Bardley of Pocatello were named the league's male and female runners of the year.

TWIN FALLS — The names of Mark Miller and Karen Poe appear frequently in this week's Times-News Bowling Honor Roll.

The duo had a hot week on the lanes last week in Twin Falls league bowling action. Miller is in the men's high game twice with games of 258 (for second place) and 238 while Poe is in the women's high game list no less than four times, including a 236 to tie for the top honors.

Miller had the top men's series with a 658 and Poe is in the women's top series list twice.

Vern Smith turned in an excellent performance in the senior citizen's ranks as he rolled a 611 series.

The bowling honor roll for the week ending Oct. 31:

Arizona St. wants world to know it can go to any bowl

TEMPE, Ariz. (UPI) — If Will Rogers were alive, he'd probably think undefeated, Arizona State was ineligible for any bowl game.

After all, Rogers said repeatedly he knew only what he read in newspapers.

But contrary to some beliefs, the Sun Devils are in fact eligible to play in any bowl game, though Coach Darryl Rogers (no relation to the renowned humorist) isn't speculating on ASU's better-than-average bowl potential.

Coach Rogers said Tuesday he does not want to discuss bowl chances for the 8-0 Devils. But ASU sports information director Paul Jensen is continuing his efforts to knock down erroneous stories

Wilkins impresses coaches, players with initial efforts

PONTIAC, Mich. (UPI) — Dominique Wilkins made the right choice coming out early — but he'll still be getting an education the remainder of the National Basketball Association season.

Wilkins is the fine young 6-7 forward for the Atlanta Hawks, who made a 23-point, 12-rebound debut against the Detroit Pistons, then followed it with a 22-point, four-rebound second game.

That shows Wilkins made the correct choice when he decided to forego his final season of college eligibility at Georgia to turn pro. Of course the big bucks contract he signed after becoming the third person taken in the draft confirmed that.

"He ran the court well," Detroit Pistons' Coach Scotty Robertson said after getting his first look at the slender, bow-legged whippet. "He has a good inside game.

"Defensively, he was very good off the ball," Robertson said. "He has a little trouble on the ball, that's why we went to Kelly (Tripucka) a few times there at the end."

The inexperience of the quick rookie was apparent at the end of Detroit's 94-86 victory over its NBA Central Division rival in the season's opening game.

Wilkins startled the Pistons, who had never seen him, with his speed in the first quarter. He scored 13 points and gathered in six rebounds in the first quarter. In the second quarter he added four points and four more rebounds.

"It was hard not to notice him," said Tripucka, who guarded Wilkins and scored on him. "He got those points in the first half — and you don't know how he got them. He ran and jumped and got them like that, mostly on fast breaks and layups."

At halftime Detroit made some adjustments defensively to stop Wilkins, like putting some double pressure on him and trying to keep him away from the basket, forcing him to shoot from outside.

"In the second half," Tripucka said, "you didn't see him. We tried to make him do most of his shooting from outside — I don't think he's that type of player."

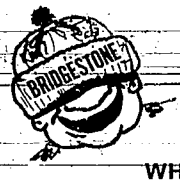

Atlanta Coach Kevin Loughery knows Wilkins has a lot to learn. Which could be one reason Wilkins was not one of the five players on the floor at the start of the fourth quarter.

"He slowed down because he didn't play as many minutes in the second half," said Loughery, who put his precocious rookie back in the lineup with 6:43 left in the game and his team leading, 75-70. He didn't score a point and left for another two minutes with 2:32 remaining and Detroit ahead, 81-80.

Tripucka scored six points on him in that span of time — all by design.

"You've got to do that," said Tripucka, who had it done to him during his season last year.

But the ability is there. Wilkins is shooting .538 for his two games, has five steals and six assists (which says something about his eye for others).

THE ACES® BOBBY WOLFF

"Men heap together the mistakes of their lives, and create a monster they call Destiny." — John O. Hobbes.

If declarer loses today's touch-and-go game, he is likely to blame it on destiny. Those who are careful enough to make their own destiny plan ahead to avoid the trap.

North's cue bid of two clubs is the Michael's Convention, describing at least 5-4 in the majors and 7-11 HCP — a poor man's takeout double.

Declarer wins the first diamond with his ace since there's no point in ducking and he's already at the key point in play. Should he do the "natural" thing and lead a trump?

If he does, West will hop up with his ace, cash his diamond queen and then lead a low club to East's queen. East will wonder why he won that trick, but not for long. Back comes a third diamond and West ruffs for one down.

How does a thinking man avoid this trap? The answer is so simple that it's difficult to see. After winning his diamond ace, instead of leading trumps, declarer should lead a club. The defense can win in either hand, but the trick comes too early to score the vital diamond ruff. It's now safe to knock out the trump ace

ANSWER: Three no trump. Eight HCP and a good five card suit should offer a decent play for game.

Totable Treats for Fall Festivities

Tailgating—a picnic at your car before or after the game — has become a popular activity associated with football and other outdoor sporting events. When it's your turn to treat the gang, what could be easier than home-baked desserts using dessert mixes as the base so that part of the preparation is already done for you.

Portable, totable foods will make the host's job easier, and the food will arrive unharmed. Bars, cakes and cookies are among the desserts most popular for away-from-home parties.

The Betty Crocker Kitchens suggest that you separate layers of cookies or bars with plastic wrap when carrying them to the stadium party.

Chocolate Chip-Peanut Butter Sandwich Cookies

1/2 package Big Batch® chocolate chip cookie mix
2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
1 egg
1 cup peanut butter

Heat oven to 375°. Knead 1 Flavor Packet about 10 seconds. Mix Flavor Packet, 1 cookie mix pouch, the flour and egg in large bowl until moist. Shape dough into smooth ball. Roll dough 1/8 inch thick on floured cloth-covered board; cut into 2-inch circles. Bake on ungreased cookie sheet until edges are light brown, 7 to 8 minutes. Cool 1 minute before removing from cookie sheet; cool cookies completely. Spread each of half the cookies with 1 heaping teaspoonful peanut butter; top with remaining cookies. About 2 dozen sandwich cookies.

Chocolate Chip-Marshmallow Creme Sandwich Cookies: Substitute 3/4 jar (7-ounce size) marshmallow creme (1 cup) for the peanut butter.

Spicy Apple-Nut Cake

Prepare 1 package Betty Crocker® Stir 'n Frost® spice cake mix as directed except — stir 1/2 cup finely chopped pared apple (about 1 small) and 1/4 cup chopped walnuts into cake mix before adding water. Sprinkle frosted cake with chopped walnuts if desired. 6 servings.

Microwave Directions: Prepare cake mix as directed above. Microwave on medium-low (30%) 5 minutes; rotate pan 1/4 turn. Microwave on high (100%) until cake is dry around edges and slightly moist in center, 3 to 5 minutes longer. (Or if microwave does not have multiple settings, microwave on high 2 minutes; rotate pan 1/4 turn. Microwave 2 to 3 1/2 minutes longer.) Cool and frost immediately. Sprinkle frosted cake with chopped walnuts if desired. Store tightly covered.

Heavenly Six-Layer Squares

1/2 cup margarine or butter, melted
1 package Betty Crocker Snackin' Cake® coconut pecan, German chocolate coconut pecan or golden chocolate chip cake mix
1 package (6 ounces) semisweet chocolate chips
1 package (6 ounces) peanut butter chips
1 package (6 ounces) butterscotch chips
1/2 cup chopped nuts
1 package (6 ounces) almond brickle chips
1 can (14 ounces) sweetened condensed milk

Heat oven to 350°. Grease rectangular pan, 13×9×2 inches. Mix margarine and cake mix (dry) with fork in medium bowl (dough will be stiff). Press dough evenly in pan with rubber spatula. Layer chocolate chips, peanut butter chips, butterscotch chips, nuts and almond brickle chips evenly over dough. Pour milk evenly over top. Bake until golden brown and bubbly, about 30 minutes. Cool completely on wire rack. Cut into about 1 1/2-inch squares. 50 squares.

Granola-Chocolate Chip Ring Cake

3/4 cup dairy sour cream
1/2 package Big Batch chocolate chip cookie mix
3 eggs
1/2 cup chopped nuts
1/3 cup packed brown sugar
2 tablespoons dairy sour cream
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon

Mix granola and 3/4 cup sour cream in large bowl; let stand 15 minutes. Heat oven to 350°. Grease and flour tube pan, 10×4 inches. Knead 1 Flavor Packet about 10 seconds. Stir Flavor Packet, 1 cookie mix pouch and the eggs into granola mixture until moist. Spread half of the batter in pan. Mix nuts, brown sugar, 2 tablespoons sour cream and the cinnamon; spoon and spread half of the nut mixture in ring onto batter in pan. Spread with remaining batter; spoon and spread remaining nut mixture in ring onto batter. Bake until golden, about 50 minutes. Loosen sides of cake from pan while warm; cool cake completely. Remove from pan.

Rocky Road Cake

1 package Betty Crocker Stir 'n Frost devils food cake mix
2 tablespoons chopped almonds
2 tablespoons miniature semisweet chocolate chips
1/2 cup miniature marshmallows, cut into thirds

Prepare cake mix as directed on package except — stir almonds and chocolate chips into cake mix before adding water. Bake until cake springs back when touched lightly in center, 30 to 35 minutes; cool. Squeeze frosting into small bowl; stir in marshmallows. Frost cake. 6 servings.

Microwave Directions: Prepare cake mix as directed above. Microwave on medium-low (30%) 5 minutes; rotate pan 1/4 turn. Microwave on high (100%) until cake is dry around edges and slightly moist in center, 3 to 5 minutes longer. (Or if microwave does not have multiple settings, microwave on high 2 minutes; rotate pan 1/4 turn. Microwave 2 to 3 1/2 minutes longer.) Cool; continue as directed except — frost cake immediately with frosting mixture. Store tightly covered.

Surprise Cream Cheese Cake

2 packages (3 ounces each) cream cheese, softened
1/4 cup packed brown sugar
1 tablespoon margarine or butter, softened
1 package Betty Crocker Snackin' Cake applesauce raisin, banana walnut or carrot nut cake mix

Heat oven to 375°. Beat cream cheese, brown sugar and margarine with fork until light and fluffy, about 3 minutes. Prepare cake mix as directed on package. Drop cream cheese mixture by 12 teaspoonfuls evenly onto batter; reserve remaining cream cheese mixture (about 3/4 cup). Bake until cake pulls away from sides of pan and springs back when touched lightly, 30 to 35 minutes. Cool in pan on wire rack. Frost top of cake with reserved cream cheese mixture. Sprinkle with chopped nuts if desir. d. 9 servings.

Surprise Cream Cheese Cupcakes: Heat oven to 350°. Prepare as directed except — mix cake mix, 1 cup water and 1 egg in medium bowl. Spoon batter into 12 ungreased medium muffin cups, 2 1/2×1 1/4 inches. Drop 1 teaspoonful cream cheese mixture onto center of batter in each cup. Bake until cupcakes spring back when touched lightly, 20 to 25 minutes. Cool completely in pan on wire rack. Remove from pan; frost with reserved cream cheese mixture. Sprinkle with chopped nuts if desired. 12 cupcakes.

Exercise gives many Americans better health, nutrition

By NATHAN J. SMITH, M.D.
University of Washington professor

ENGLEWOOD CLIFFS, N.J. — Millions of Americans are enjoying new and improved levels of nutrition, health and fitness with a very significant improvement occurring during the past decade.

This has not come from any enhancement in the quality of the food we eat, nor has it come from some startling discover in nutrition research laboratories in industry, or in our universities.

These fit Americans are the 25 million runners and joggers, the additional 20 million or more who regularly play tennis, the eight million who populate the ski slopes as well as the millions who would be found on the hiking trails and in aerobic dance groups.

They are Americans young and old who are finding enjoyment in active energy-expending lifestyles. Being active is helping increasing numbers to eat better, feel better, look better and live better than is possible with a sedentary existence.

If you are now into regular active exercise, or perhaps even a competitive sport, an important nutrition question you may be asking is how to include enough energy from the proper sources in your diet so that you can pursue active interests effectively with greatest enjoyment.

Athletes are keenly aware that food is their source of energy and are increasingly concerned about managing their diets to optimally provide energy needs.

As an active sport participant you may be eating more, and probably more regularly, than you did before you got into sports. But are you getting enough energy in your diet to be at your best?

In dealing with many highly competitive varsity athletes at the university and high school level, we find that the most common nutrition problem among these athletes is their failure to eat enough to meet what are often very large energy needs. The problem is so common that when our coaches find an athlete underperforming they first want to know if she or he is getting enough to eat.

The same situation is true with runners who truly enjoy those daily morning or evening runs and the long miles they put in on the weekends. Busy work and training schedules may not leave "enough time" to eat enough to meet energy needs.

How can you be sure that the food you eat will satisfy the demands of your active lifestye? The answer is really quite simple. Anyone involved in an active sport should develop the habit of regularly monitoring and recording daily morning nude weight on a twice weekly schedule. The active person's weight, once it is desired level, should remain constant.

The active new athlete enjoys food that makes a significant needed energy contribution to his diet and yet is compatible with a modern dietary lifestyle — the following three recipes meet this need.

CARAWAY FRUIT DRESSING

½ cup honey
½ cup white wine vinegar
1 teaspoon caraway seeds
1 teaspoon dry mustard
¼ teaspoon salt

In 1-pint jar with tight fitting lid place corn oil, honey, caraway seeds, mustard and salt. Cover, shake well and refrigerate. Shake throughly before serving. Serve on fruit and-or assorted salad greens. (Makes about 1½ cups.)

RISOTTO PRIMAVERA

1 cup sliced mushrooms
½ cup chopped onion
1 clove garlic, minced or pressed
1 cup long-grain rice
½ cup dry white wine
2½ cups chicken bouillon or broth
¼ lb. green beans, cut in 1-inch pieces
1 cup diced green and/or sweet red peppers
1 medium tomato, coarsely chopped
1 small zucchini, thinly sliced
½ cup grated Parmesan cheese
¼ cup chopped parsley
dash each of pepper and nutmeg

In large skillet heat corn oil over medium heat. Add mushrooms, onion and garlic; stirring frequently, cook 1 minute. Add rice; stirring frequently, cook — 2 minutes — or — until — lightly browned. Stir in wine; cook until it is absorbed. Stir in broth. Bring to a boil; reduce heat. Cover and simmer 10 minutes. Stir in green beans, peppers, tomato and zucchini. Cover; simmer 5 minutes longer. Remove from heat. Let stand 5 to 10 minutes or until rice is tender. Stir in remaining ingredients. Serve immediately. (Makes 6 servings.)

CHOCOLATE ZUCCHINI CAKE

⅔ cups unsweetened cocoa
1 tealspoon ground cinnamon
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
4 eggs
2 cups sugar
1 cup corn oil
1 teaspoon vanilla
3 cups coarsely shredded zucchini
1 cup coarsely chopped walnuts
1 cup raisins

Grease and flour 10x4-inch tube pan. In medium bowl stir together flour, cocoa, cinnamon, baking powder, baking soda and salt. In large bowl with mixer at medium speed beat eggs, sugar, corn oil and vanilla until well blended. Gradually beat in flour mixture until well mixed. Stir in zucchini, walnuts and raisins.

Spoon in prepared pan; bake in 350 F oven about 1 hour and 15 minutes or until cake tester inserted in center comes out clean. Cool in pan 25 minutes. Remove from pan. Cool competely on wire rack. (Makes 16 servings.)

Juice from naturally sweet grapefruit makes oatmeal breakfast cake unbelieveably moist

Winter pears becoming popular

By ROBERT W. STRUBE
Chicago Sun-Times

From September through May, pears are plentiful. The winter varieties seem to increase in popularity each year.

There are several varieties of winter pears, including the Anjou, Bosc and Comice. These remain the most popular and the ones we see most often.

Pear Nut Torte

½ cup butter
1 cup granulated sugar
½ cup brown sugar
2 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 cups all-purpose flour
2 teaspoons baking soda
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cinammon
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
½ cup chopped nuts
cup raisins

Core pears, but do not peel. Finely chop enough to measure 2½ cups. Cream butter and sugars. Add eggs, one at a time, beating well after each addition. Add vanilla. Sift together flour, baking soda, salt and spices. Add to creamed mixture and blend. Add chopped pears, nuts and raisins.

Mix lightly but thoroughly. Turn into a greased and floured 2-quart fluted tube pan. Bake in a 350-degree oven for 60 to 70 minutes, or until cake tests done. Cool a few minutes before turning out on a wire rack.

Good health, nutrition top priority

McALLEN, Texas — Good health and nutrition have become a priority for vast number of Americans. They are much more interested in what they are consuming and are looking for good nutrition and delicious additions to their daily meals.

Adding grapefruit and oatmeal to meals is a good start for good nutrition because nature packed them with a multitude of vitamins and minerals. Tree-ripened Texas Ruby Reds by the half add the goodness of Vitamin C. Oatmeal, too, has a super amount of nutritional value.

Anytime is the right time for a great breakfast combination of oats and grapefruit served au natural, or included in a delectable recipe like Sunburst Breakfast Cake.

This healthy combination of Texas Ruby Reds and oatmeal blended together make a tasty addition to any breakfast, brunch, or meal.

SUNBURST BREAKFAST CAKE

2 Texas Ruby Red Grapefruit
1 cup three-minute quick cooking oats
½ cup butter or margarine
1 cup sugar
½ cup firmly packed brown sugar
2 eggs, beaten
1½ cups all-purposed flour
1 teaspoon soda
½ teaspoon cinnamon
vanilla or fruit-flavored yogurt

Finely grate 2 teaspoons peel from grapefruit and set aside. Peel and section grapefruit over bowl, reserving juice. Set sections aside.

Measure grapefruit juice and add water to equal 1¼ cups liquid. Bring liquid to a boil in a saucepan. Remove from heat and stir in oats and butter; let stand for 20 minutes. Combine reserved grapefruit peel and remaining ingredients except yogurt in a mixing bowl. Stir in oats mixture, blending well. Pour into a greased 13x9x2 inch baking pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 35 minutes. Serve warm or cool, topped with yogurt and grapefruit sections.

Women fall prey for con rackets

NEW YORK (UPI) — Women are victimized more often than men in confidence games and swindles, says the president of the National Association of Consumer Agency administrators.

An article in the November issue of Ladies' Home Journal quotes Clair Villano as saying, "Women have a tendency to want to be thought of as pleasant and polite. Many of us don't want to be considered tough customers."

Ms. Villano and other consumer fraud specialists say women tend to be duped by con artists because they are inclined to assume the best about people and often look for bargains and ways to stretch tight budgets. These needs play into the hands of scam artists.

The article by Katherine Barrett and David Nimmons says con games and swindles in 1981 accounted for "more than 10 times the amount lost in burglaries, robberies and muggings combined."

Exercise gives many Americans better health, nutrition

By NATHAN J. SMITH, M.D.
University of Washington professor

ENGLEWOOD CLIFFS, N.J. — Millions of Americans are enjoying new and improved levels of nutrition, health and fitness with a very significant improvement occurring during the past decade.

This has not come from any enhancement in the quality of the food we eat, nor has it come from some startling discover in nutrition research laboratories in industry, or in our universities.

These fit Americans are the 25 million runners and joggers, the additional 20 million or more who regularly play tennis, the eight million who populate the ski slopes as well as the millions who would be found on the hiking trails and in aerobic dance groups.

They are Americans young and old who are finding enjoyment in active energy-expending lifestyles. Being active is helping increasing numbers to eat better, feel better, look better and live better than is possible with a sedentary existence.

If you are now into regular active exercise, or perhaps even a competitive sport, an important nutrition question you may be asking is how to include enough energy from the proper sources in your diet so that you can pursue active interests effectively with greatest enjoyment.

Athletes are keenly aware that food is their source of energy and are increasingly concerned about managing their diets to optimally provide energy needs.

As an active sport participant you may be eating more, and probably more regularly, than you did before you got into sports. But are you getting enough energy in your diet to be at your best?

In dealing with many highly competitive varsity athletes at the university and high school level, we find that the most common nutrition problem among these athletes is their failure to eat enough to meet what are often very large energy needs. The problem is so common that when our coaches find an athlete underperforming they first want to know if she or he is getting enough to eat.

The same situation is true with runners who truly enjoy those daily morning or evening runs and the long miles they put in on the weekends. Busy work and training schedules may not leave "enough time" to eat enough to meet energy needs.

How can you be sure that the food you eat will satisfy the demands of your active lifestyle? The answer is really quite simple. Anyone involved in an active sport should develop the habit of regularly monitoring and recording early morning nude weight on a twice weekly schedule. The active person's weight, once it is desired level, should remain constant.

The active, new athlete enjoys food that makes a significant needed energy contribution to his diet and yet is compatible with a modern dietary lifestyle — the following three recipes meet this need.

CARAWAY FRUIT DRESSING

¾ cup corn oil
⅓ cup honey
⅓ cup white wine vinegar
1 teaspoon caraway seeds
1 teaspoon dry mustard
¼ teaspoon salt

In 1-pint jar with tight fitting lid place corn oil, honey, caraway seeds, mustard and salt. Cover, shake well and refrigerate. Shake throughly before serving. Serve on fruit and or assorted salad greens. (Makes about 1½ cups.)

RISOTTO PRIMAVERA

¼ cup corn oil
1 cup sliced mushrooms
½ cup chopped onion
1 clove garlic, minced or pressed
1 cup long-grain rice
½ cup dry white wine
2½ cups chicken bouillon or broth
¾ lb. green beans, cut in 1-inch pieces
1 cup diced green and/or sweet red peppers
1 medium tomato, coarsely chopped
1 small zucchini, thinly sliced
½ cup grated Parmesan cheese
¼ cup chopped parsley
dash each of pepper and nutmeg

In large skillet heat corn oil over medium heat. Add mushrooms, onion and garlic; stirring frequently, cook 1 minute. Add rice; stirring frequently, cook 2 minutes or until lightly browned. Stir in wine; cook until it is absorbed. Stir in broth. Bring to a boil; reduce heat. Cover and simmer 10 minutes. Stir in green beans, peppers, tomato and zucchini. Cover; simmer 5 minutes longer. Remove from heat. Let stand 5 to 10 minutes or until rice is tender. Stir in remaining ingredients. Serve immediately. (Makes 6 servings.)

CHOCOLATE ZUCCHINI CAKE

3 cups unsifted flour
⅔ cups unsweetened cocoa
1 tealspoon ground cinnamon
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
4 eggs
2 cups sugar
1 cup corn oil
1 teaspoon vanilla
3 cups coarsely shredded zucchini
1 cup coarsely chopped walnuts
1 cup raisins

Grease and flour 10x4-inch tube pan. In medium bowl stir together flour, cocoa, cinnamon, baking powder, baking soda and salt. In large bowl with mixer at medium speed beat eggs, sugar, corn oil and vanilla until well blended. Gradually beat in flour mixture until well mixed. Stir in zucchini, walnuts and raisins.

Spoon in prepared pan; bake in 350 F oven about 1 hour and 15 minutes or until cake tester inserted in center comes out clean. Cool in pan 25 minutes. Remove from pan. Cool competely on wire rack. (Makes 16 servings.)

Selections will include "Minature Quartet No. 2" by David Stone with Jenni Hovey, Lowell Krahn, Lisa Lund and Todd Swensen, violin; Thor Mikesell and Kristen Durbin, violas and Scott Shearer and Sheill Miles; cellos; "Homoresque" by Dvorak and "Gavotte in G Minor" by Bach, performed by Aundria Krahn, Julienne Hamilton, Alicia White, Katy Cluff, Jenni Cluff, Lovenia Mikesell and Steve Black.

"Happy Farmer" by Schumann, "Minuet No. 2" by Bach, "Andantino, Perpetual Motion, Allegro" by Suzuki, "Long Long Ago" by Bayley, "May Song" and "Go Tell Aunt Rhody," folk tunes, performed by Elise Burtenshaw, Emily Burtenshaw, Betsy Cluff, Andy Cluff, Miho Story, Cheri Allen, Melanie Kerbs, John Krahn, Andrew Swensen, Jenni Call, Morgan Williams and Kenny McCall.

Lowell Krahn will play a solo "Allegro" by Bach and a demonstration will be given by "Twinklers." Rebecca Seaman, Danny Murphy and Nicki Williams.

High-tech Yule gifts offered

Why not go high-tech for the holidays? Believe it or not, we've reached that level of computer friendliness at which magazines, such as Popular Computing, offer gift-giving guides just chock full of "Computer Stocking Stuffers." Of course, most of the items are things like 16K Ram Expansion Cards for your Apple, but there are a few whimsical gifts as well, just to prove that there is such a thing as high-tech humor.

First, there are computer caddies, which are actually flower pots and pencil-and-office-supply holders designed to look exactly like a pint-sized computer terminal, complete with graphics on the screen. They sell for $8.99 (plus $2 postage and handling) from Compugift Inc., Box 1408, El Toro, Calif. 92630.

There also is the Great Computer Calendar, available for $7.95 at most bookstores; it features such sexy computer pinups as a microcomputer chip being dwarfed by an ant. There also is an "Official I Hate Videogames Handbook" from Simon & Schuster for $2.95, which is no doubt as clever as all those other I-hate-something books.

Also, from Electronic Protection Devices come lemon, lime, plum and orange "flavored" electronic surge protection devices, brightly colored to match their flavors. Prices range from $49.50 to $139.95. . . . And may all your Christmases be on-line.

'Tis season for homemade soups

Special to The Times-News

Instead of shimmering gelatin or crispy fruit salads, try a seasonal mealtime change of scene this week. Say for instance thick hot soup.

Soup can be a balanced meal by itself, if seasoned properly. Search for and save colorful vegetables, meats, meat bones and grains to combine with any sort of broth. Cook them all together for at least three hours, adding more liquid as necessary to keep everything simmering.

Big tip! Bone-in hams are going to be your best ham buys this holiday season. Learn to make a few different ham bone-flavored soups. Here are several to try.

OLD-FASHIONED LENTIL SOUP

1 quart water
2 chicken or beef bouillon cubes
1 large onion, peeled and diced
1 large tomato, diced
3 carrots, pared and sliced
2 potatoes, peeled and cubed
2 sprigs fresh parsley
1 tablespoon tomato ketchup salt to season to taste
ham bone, saw in half if necessary

In soup kettle, soak lentils in water to cover 8 hours or overnight; drain. With lentils in soup kettle, put water, bouillon cubes, onion, tomato, carrots, potatoes, parsley, ketchup, salt to season to taste and ham bone. Cover; simmer 2 to 3 hours, stirring occasionally and adding more water if necessary. Remove ham bone from kettle. Serve hot. (Makes 8 servings.)

GRANDMA'S CABBAGE SOUP

ham bone, saw in half if necessary
2 quarts water
1-2 teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
2 sprigs fresh parsley
1 large head cabbage, wedged
3 onions, peeled and quartered
4 stalks celery with leaves, diced
1-2 pats butter

In large soup kettle, put ham bone and water, salt, pepper and parsley. Cover; simmer 2 to 3 hours, adding more water if necessary to keep water level same. Add cabbage, onions, celery and butter; cover and simmer 1 more hour. Remove hambone and serve hot. (Makes 8 servings.)

U.S. SENATE BEAN SOUP

1 pound marrow beans
3 quarts water
3 potatoes, cooked and mashed
6 stalks celery, minced
½ cup minced parsley
2 onions, peeled and minced
2 cloves garlic, peeled and mashed
1 ham bone, saw in half if necessary
salt and pepper to season to taste

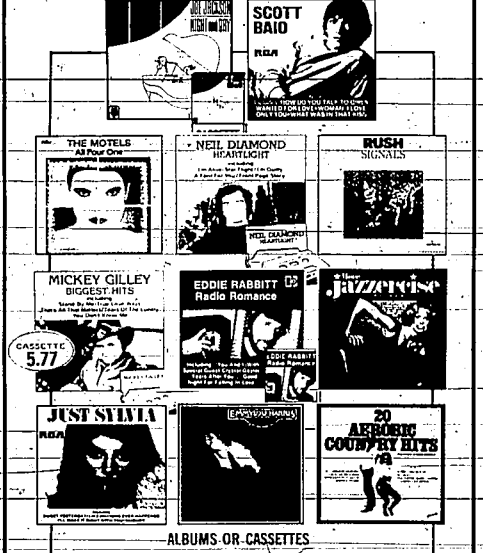

In large soup kettle, put beans with water to cover and soak them overnight; drain. Put 3 quarts water, with the beans; cover and cook 1 hour, or until beans are tender. Drain beans. Now put the 3 quarts water, potatoes, celery, parsley, onions, garlic and ham bone with the beans. Cook 2 more hours, stirring occasionally and keeping heat low enough to just simmer soup. Remove ham bone. Serve hot. (Makes 8 to 10 servings.)

THIS WEEK'S BEST MARKET BUYS: Olives will be in short supply this holiday time. Turkey prices are expected to get gradually higher. That means all grades of birds. Oranges are coming in now but don't expect the prices to get lower . . . they may get even higher. Cranberries may be in short supply. Nuts are in good supply this year and walnut prices will continue to go down. Bone-in hams will be your best buy.

Pumpkins useful after Halloween

By LINDA CICERO
Knight-Ridder Newspapers

Pity the poor pumpkin.

As vegetables go, it's really a bumpkin, an unsophisticated ball of flesh we caricature into jack-o'-lanterns once a year. After one brief moment of glory at Halloween, it's usually left to rot its life away.

Oh, sure, the pumpkin helped Cinderella make her entrance, and it sure makes a great pie. But after Thanksgiving, even that outlet is pretty shaky — only die-hard pumpkin eaters down the stuff at other times of the year.

But in its glory days, the pumpkin was a king among squash. Indians who met the Spaniards on the Rio Grande included pumpkin seeds among their gifts of peace. The conquerors were taken by the pumpkin, and took it back to Europe with their other golden plunder. One legacy of the conquistadores, still found in New Mexican cooking, is a chicken dish in a sauce of blanched almonds, ground pumpkin seeds, cuminseed, popped corn, ground chili and garlic.

Pumpkin is a North American native, cultivated long before Columbus reached our shores. It's close kin to the cucumber, melons and chayote, and is a member of the green and yellow vegetable family. As a food source, it is rich in Vitamin A.

It's time to give the pumpkin its due, to liberate it from its pie plate and let it soar.

Most recipes use pumpkin puree, but the flesh also can be cut into chunks and baked. Smaller pumpkins are preferable, and you should look for deep yellow-orange, fine-grained flesh. Generally, 1 pound of pumpkin yields ¾ cup of cooked puree.

To prepare the puree, cut and remove the stem from the pumpkin, then cut it in half. Remove the seeds and fiber, reserving the seeds for roasting. Line a heavy baking sheet with sides with aluminum foil. Place the halves on the foil cut side down. Cover lightly with another piece of foil and bake on the middle rack of a 450-degree oven for about 1 hour. The pumpkin is cooked when the outer shell is easily pierced with a fork.

Remove the baking sheet from the oven and, while the pumpkin is still hot, peel back and discard the shell. Most of it will come off easily, but you may have to scrape some off with a knife. When the pumpkin is cool enough to handle, cut it into chunks and puree it in a food processor, blender or food mill. Refrigerate or freeze the puree until ready to use.

To roast fresh pumpkin seeds, you'll need about 1 tablespoon of vegetable oil and ½ teaspoon of coarse salt for every 2 cups of seeds. After removing the seeds from the pumpkin, place them in a bowl of cool water and wash away any remaining bits of fiber. Drain in a sieve and rinse again with cool water, rubbing off any remaining fiber. Dry with paper towels.

Spread the dry seeds on a baking sheet that has been coated with oil, and toss the seeds to make sure they get a film of oil. Roast in a 350-degree oven for 20 minutes, tossing them every 5 minutes until they are golden. Remove the seeds from the oven and sprinkle immediately with coarse salt. Toss again. When cool, store them in an airtight container.

PUMPKIN SOUP

2 medium onions, chopped fine
3 cloves garlic, minced
3 tablespoons butter or margarine
4 cups pumpkin puree
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon freshly ground pepper
⅛ teaspoon nutmeg
2 cups yogurt or cream
¼ pound sharp Cheddar cheese, grated
½ cup chopped fresh parsley

Melt the butter in a 2-quart saucepan and add the onions and garlic. Saute over medium heat until the onions are transparent. Add the pumpkin puree, salt, pepper and nutmeg. Add the yogurt or cream and, stirring constantly, bring to a simmer.

Simmer for 15 minutes, whisking occasionally to keep from sticking. Just before serving, add the cheese. Cook just long enough for the cheese to melt and the soup to bubble. At serving time, sprinkle with fresh parsley.

PUMPKIN GRATIN

2 to 2½ pound pumpkin, halved, seeded, peeled and cut into ½-inch cubes
¼ cup flour
One third cup olive oil
7 or 8 garlic cloves, finely chopped
2 tablespoons finely chopped fresh parsley
Salt and pepper to taste

Toss the cubes of pumpkin in the flour until they are evenly coated. Generously oil the bottom and sides of an ovenproof casserole. Fill it with the pumpkin and scatter the garlic and parsley over top.

Season with salt and pepper, sprinkle the remaining oil over the surface and bake in a 325-degree oven for 2 to 2½ hours, or until the top has formed a rich dark crust. (It is not necessary to add any water during cooking, because the pumpkin produces enough liquid of its own.)

PUMPKIN AND APPLES

2 pound pumpkin, peeled, seeded and cut into 1-inch squares
2 medium-sized tart apples, cored, peeled and chopped
One third cup sugar
½ cup water
4 tablespoons butter
Salt to taste
One third cup toasted almonds
1 cup unflavored yogurt
Sugar (optional)
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon

To make the sauce, combine the yogurt and the sugar, if you are using it, in a small bowl. Blend thoroughly. Sprinkle with the cinnamon and set aside.

Combine the pumpkin and apples in a heavy saucepan. Sprinkle with the sugar and pour in the water. Dot with the butter, season with a pinch of salt and bring to a boil over high heat. Reduce the heat, cover, and cook gently for about 20 minutes or until the pumpkin is tender, stirring several times and adding more water if needed. Transfer the mixture to a warmed serving dish.

Sprinkle with the nuts and serve at once with the cinnamon yogurt sauce. This is an interesting accompaniment to roast turkey.

Dear Abby

Sex instincts ignore society taboos

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: The letter from "Crushed," whose 16-year-old daughter became pregnant by her 15-year-old adopted son, made a point that few people are willing to acknowledge.

All human beings are sexual beings — like it or not. We are born with the instinct to function sexually, so why all the denial?

How can people in this society be so technically advanced and so socially primitive? Why don't we teach our children the truth about sex?

Sex between siblings is taboo. It usually (but not always) occurs when the older person exploits the younger, one out of curiosity or in search of sexual gratification.

When children are sufficiently mature physically to reproduce — and the sperm meets the fertile egg — pregnancy occurs. The egg doesn't know (or care) if the sperm is a relative.

Incest is far more common than most think. I know. It happened in our family. I was a 15-year-old boy (young man, actually) when my 9-year-old precocious sister came into MY bed one night while we were home alone.

Our parents were respectable, churchgoing, middle-class people. They never told us anything about sex. All we knew is what we'd picked up from the other kids.

What went on between my sister and me didn't last long, fortunately. But it did happen. The guilt and shame lasted a lifetime, although we never talked about it. I am 72, and my kid sister died last year at 66.

Why am I writing this? Because I hope some "respectable" parents who are too shy to tell their kids about sex will see this.

Most parents assume that their kids will "naturally" abstain from having sex with a sister or brother because they will "know" it's wrong. Not true.

Kids will naturally explore and experiment unless they are taught NOT to. And even then, the opportunities for it should be minimized and all temptations removed.

I know this is much too long for your column, so go ahead and cut it to suit yourself, but please get the message across.

— ANONYMOUS IN MINNESOTA

DEAR ANONYMOUS: It's long, but I'll not cut a word. It's well worth the space. Thanks for writing.

DEAR ABBY: I'll get right to the point. Our beautiful, intelligent, grown daughter is shacking up with a creep.

If you have any suggestions to make this parental cross more bearable, we'd like to hear them.

— SAN DIEGO

DEAR SAN: You can thank your lucky stars she's not married to him. Or consider this: He may be a creep in your eyes, but in hers, he's the cream of the crop.

DEAR ABBY: Regarding "Thin on Top," who's worried about his appeal to the opposite sex, I'm surprised you didn't respond with my father's old adage:

If a man is bald in front, he's a great thinker.

OLD EL PASO

Beef and Bean Enchiladas

1 pound ground beef
½ cup chopped onion
1 package (1¼ oz.) OLD EL PASO® Taco Seasoning Mix
1 can (16 oz.) OLD EL PASO® Refried Beans
1 can (4 oz.) OLD EL PASO® Chopped Green Chiles
½ cup beef bouillon or beef broth
1 container (10 oz.) OLD EL PASO® Red Enchilada Sauce (divided usage)
8 flour tortillas
2 cups shredded Cheddar cheese

Brown ground beef and onion in large skillet; drain. Stir in taco seasoning mix, refried beans, green chilies, beef bouillon and ½ cup of the enchilada sauce. Cook on medium heat until thickened, stirring occasionally, about 10 to 15 minutes. Remove from heat. Fill each tortilla with a scant ½ cup meat mixture. Roll-up tightly. Place seam-side down in a 13x9-inch baking pan. Pour remaining sauce over enchiladas. Top with remaining meat mixture and sprinkle with cheese. Bake in a 375°F oven for 15 to 20 minutes. Cool slightly. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Most commonly asked questions on refunding answered

By MARTIN SLOANE
United Feature Syndicate

Here are the 10 most frequently asked questions about coupons, and their answers:

Question: Can a coupon be used on the same item that is being advertised on sale?

Answer: Most supermarkets will allow you to combine the discount of a manufacturers' cents-off coupon with their own advertised special discount.

Question: Does a store have to honor a coupon?

Answer: No. Stores redeem coupons voluntarily and because of this they are free to establish their own redemption policies, so long as they don't conflict with the manufacturers' redemption instructions printed on the coupons.

Question: If a coupon does not specify that a particular size product must be purchased, can it be used on any size?

Answer: If no size is specified, then it can be used on any size, and this usually includes trial size packages.

Question: Can an old coupon be used if the product is still being made?

Answer: If the coupon has no expiration date and the product is still available, then you should be able to use it.

Question: Can you use a cents-off coupon along with a "Buy 1-Get 1 Free" coupon?

Answer: Coupons can only be used on a product that is purchased, and this means that you can't use the cents-off coupon on the free item. Can you use it along with the "Buy 1-Get 1 Free" coupon on the item that you are purchasing? If the "Buy 1" coupon says "only one coupon per purchase," then you can't. If there is no such restriction, you may be able to use both coupons on the last item, depending on the redemption policy of the store.

Question: What does "1+20 cent cash value" printed on a coupon mean?

Answer: Some states require that all coupons have a cash value. I don't know of any instance where coupons were redeemed for this cash value.

Question: Does an expired coupon have any value?

Answer: An expired coupon has absolutely no value.

Question: If a coupon is only good on a particular size item, and that size isn't available, can you use it on a different size?

Answer: No, the store is only permitted to redeem the coupon on a purchase of the specified size. If you have this problem, write to the company and ask for the name of a store in your area that carries the specified size, or an exchange of the coupon for one good on a size that is more readily available.

Question: How can I find more of the coupons I need?

Answer: Get your non-couponing friends and relatives to save their newspaper food sections and color coupon inserts for you. When a newspaper has more than $1 worth of coupons you can use, buy several copies. It's one of the best investments you can make.

Question: How can I save more from the coupons I clip?

Answer: Clip everything what you can't use, you can trade! Put all the coupons you can't use in an envelope and look for opportunities to trade them with couponing friends and neighbors. Why not invite them for coffee and a swap session? Trading coupons will multiply your savings.

COLDS
by Dr. Ludwig C. Landwehr

Dr. Landwehr

THE COMMON COLD is a warning of an unbalanced metabolism — too much secretion, too little elimination. It is a sign of a body below par in its ability to properly eliminate wastes and the toxins, which are the by-products of metabolism.

The work of the body is performed by a myriad of muscles, glands, tissues and cells, all of which are controlled in their action by nerves. When the kidneys, lungs, colon or pores of the skin are not properly performing their work of elimination, there are two primary causes:

1. Interference with normal flow of nerve force to the nerve centers controlling the various channels of elimination.

2. Nutritional deficiency resulting in a weakening of these nerves and the channels of elimination which they control.

Both of these factors should be considered and steps should be taken to correct them. If these conditions are not corrected, but allowed to degenerate, there will undoubtedly be a recurrence of the cold or worse.

(One of a series of articles published in the public interest to explain and illustrate the practice of scientific chiropractic, written by Dr. Ludwig C. Landwehr, Main West Chiropractic Clinic, 717 — Main Ave. W., Twin Falls. Tel. 733-0522.)

VAN NUYS, Calif. — If you think fresh navel oranges, arriving now in excellent supply from California-Arizona, make great eating-pit-of-hand snacks, you're right!

But don't overlook their use in easy and refreshing desserts for family and dinner guests.

Take this idea that combines western and eastern thinking. Western thought these days tends towards lighter desserts, expecially using fresh fruits in season.

And from Hong Kong, Eastern thinking is to eat fresh oranges after the dinner meal . . . in fact over 60 percent of all fresh oranges are eaten there at that time of day. The reason most given for this eating pattern is that oranges "aid in digestion."

Interesting also is that in Hong Kong they eat nearly four times as many fresh oranges per person as we do in the United States. Fifty-four pounds per person per year versus fourteen pounds in the U.S. And that's a lot of oranges!

Combining these two ideas . . . lighter desserts and oranges after a dinner meal . . . Oranges a la Orange was conceived. It's a light refreshing dessert of peeled and halved navel oranges accented with orange liqueur . . . easy, elegant and the best of East and West!

Spiced Orange Halves is yet another version of fresh oranges for dessert. Also easy to prepare, it is equally good served warm or chilled.

ORANGES A LA ORANGE

6 California-Arizona oranges
¼ cup sugar
½ cup curacao or other orange-flavored liqueur
¼ cup toasted shredded coconut

Grate the peel from 1 orange; set peel aside. Peel and cut each orange in half lengthwise; with shallow "V" shape cut, remove center core. Place oranges in bowl; set aside. To make syrup, in saucepan combine water and sugar; bring to boil, stirring to dissolve sugar. Remove from heat; add curacao and grated peel. Pour over orange halves. Chill 4 hours or overnight, stirring occasionally. To serve, place 2 orange halves and small amount of syrup in each dessert dish; sprinkle with coconut. (Makes 6 servings.)

Wine variations: Substitute ⅓ cup white port or sauterne for curacao. Increase sugar to ¼ cup. Proceed as above.

SPICED ORANGE HALVES

6 California-Arizona oranges, peeled
1 can, 6 oz. size, unsweetened pineapple juice
¼ cup water
¼ cup honey
grated peel of 1 fresh orange
4 sticks cinnamon
½ teaspoon whole cloves

Cut each orange in half lengthwise, with shallow "V" shapped cut remove center core. Place orange in bowl; set aside. In saucepan combine pineapple juice, water, honey, orange peel, cinnamon and cloves; bring to boil, stirring occasionally. Reduce heat; simmer 5 minutes. Pour over orange halves. Chill 4 hours or overnight. (Makes 6 servings.)

Spiced Orange Halves and Oranges al la Orange both are elegant and easy to prepare
